has since compelled him to live a life of crime.

In February, 1913, young Gardner disappeared. Wray, who is said to have been a boarder at the boy's home, also vanished at the same time the boy did. On May 8, the boy and Wray were arrested in a park here as suspicious persons and docketed as Richard and Robert Wray, of Philadelphia, the man saying they were brothers. The next day they were committed to jail. Police here were not satisfied with the explanation as to the identity of the two. The boy, after sharp questioning, finally admitted his correct name and gave his parents' address.
