must see an end of contests within the Republican party. Every effort hereafter must be bent toward the great duty of replacing the present dangerous influences at Washington with an administration that will in all things voice the sentiments and spirit of the American people. To this task all others must be secondary. The voters will decide upon the Issues and the candidates to-morrow. There can be no appeal at this crisis in the affairs of the nation from the decision of the primaries. That this is the dominant thought is indicated in the attitude of Republicans all over the country who are urging the party leaders to hare over the senting a united front in this year's epoch-making campaign.

Schuylkill county alone in Pennsylvania derives a revenue of $260,000 a year from liquor licenses, and adding this to what the national Government receives, brings the tax revenue in Schuylkill, from alcoholic manufacture and sale, to more than $400,000 per annum.

This is only a very little part, of course, of the money spent for "booze" in Schuylkill county in a year. It is not nearly so effective a measure as the Senate bill was. That is the highest praise one may pass upon it.

As a whole it is inadequate. The preparedness program of the Democratic Congress, which the President swung around the circle to defend, has dwindled down to an actual regular. THE PRIMARY ELECTIONS THROUGHOUT Pennsylvania tomorrow the voters of all parties will choose their candidates, decide the issues and express their preferences for party leadership. Not withstanding that the campaign leading up to the primaries has been vigor-market with the product of his cheap labor and sell at a price which desiroys every prospect that the American portance, all forecasters agree that the vote is likely to be light. Thousands of voters persist in the notion that the primary elections are of minor importance and that it matters little one way or the other whether they participate or not.

In any case this is a wrong view, and especially is the indifference of the people to be deplored at this time. The primary elections of to-morrow offer the voter opportunity to express his convictions and his opinions on national, State and local candidates and platforms. After the primaries and the national conventions, State and local lissues of very necessity must be subordinated to the great and all-important national questions to be decided at the November elections. It is one of the interesting signs of the times that when bands play just now they render more patriotic airs than anything else. The every other night band practice concerts that are night band practice concerts that are heard along Market and other streets are largely devoted to music of that inspiring variety and the bands that lead the parades fall back on old-time favorites with a national slant or else play some of the new patriotic marches which have become so popular for the music as well as the sentiment. A striking illustration of this trend of music was given a few evenings ago, when the band attached to the carnival which played up town during the week gave its nightly concert in Market Square. This band was a good, lively one as carnival bands go, and attracted much attention by the earnest manner in which its members attended to business. But the interesting thing was that almost every air played on Saturday was patriotic. One after another they were played and the crowd which gathered around showed that it was in sympathy by liberal applause. Even the German bands have taken a leaf out of the book of the other bands and are piaying American airs, although they do render "Tipperary," too, and the street organs which are now exclusively Italian enterprises fairly revel in American airs with "Tipperary" and the "Rocky Road to Dublin" thrown in as compliment along the same lines as the German contribution of the British battle song. Some of the latest patriotic airs bid fair to be as lasting as some of those which gained vogue in the eightles and nineties, being much along the same lines. However, there are still a good many people who like to hear every now and then the stirring airs of "My Own United States" and that pulse-quickening "Battle Hymn of the Republic." This country has some fine old patriotic airs and "America, I Love You" and other new ones have taken rank with them in popular estimation in Harrisburg, judging from the calls made upon the leaders of the bands and orchestras.

It's a wonder how traffic manages to flow so evenly in Market, Third and Fourth streets on Saturday nights but heard along Market and other streets

It's a wonder how traffic manages to flow so evenly in Market, Third and Fourth streets on Saturday nights, but it is more of a wonder how motorcycles escape disaster in navigating amid the maze of automobiles, trucks, teams and the ever-venturesome mail wagon. Perhaps the motorcyclists are like the messenger boys in bearing charmed lives and get away with situations which would horrify the average man. Half a dozen cycles puffed into the jam at Third and Market streets at one time Saturday night, wriggled around cars and got out into side streets without mishap, although the traffic officer probably had his own troubles.

With the coming of the warmer weather the number and kind of the musical sounds from Market street amusement places is increasing. During the winter the city's musical entertainment was more or less interrupted by necessary closing of doors, but now the doors are open and the airs are wafted for half a block. The most entrapping operas are heard for
