Crex Rugs Give an Atmosphere of Solid Comfort to Home and Porch

Crex rugs occupy too prominent a place in American homes to require an introduction at Summer's threshold. In addition to the homey atmosphere which they impart to porch or room, they express the very last word in floor covering.

Crex rugs are made of the choicest selection of cultivated wire grass and are sanitary, durable and inexpensive. Every housewife who has learned the desirability of using Crex rugs will agree with us that Crex coverings are easy to keep clean and are not affected by rain or dampness.

HIGHWAY PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED

Important Conferences of Men Interested in Agriculture Is Scheduled

Some interesting announcements regarding the State administration's policy for a highway legislative appropriation program for next session of the general assembly are expected to be made at the Spring meeting of the State Board of Agriculture and Farmers' Institute at Reading on May 23 and 24.

Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, Chief Engineer W. D. Usher, of the Highway Department, and others are to speak on Tuesday evening, while Congressman Henry A. Barnhart, of Illinois, will discuss the national plan. Attention will also be called to the State-wide good roads day, which was inaugurated last year by the late Commissioner Robert J. Cunningham and which will be observed on May 25 this year.

In addition to speaking on highways the Governor is expected to make some statement regarding his plans for agricultural advancement. The meeting will likely be much occupied with discussion of legislation as soils, conservation, crop marketing, community work, poultry raising and farm advisory work will be discussed.

H. M. Anderson, New Park, will discuss potato raising, which will be one of the big themes this year. Prof. Helmar Bahd, United States Department of Agriculture, will talk breeding; H. R. Lewis, New Jersey State experiment station, and E. L. Phillips, New Bethlehem, on poultry; Howard W. Selby, Philadelphia, on publicity for the farmer; E. B. Dorsett and S. W. Funk, of the State farm advisors on grading and better marketing plans.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, actor and manager, commenting on the superiority of the movies in certain ways to that of the regular stage, says: "The purpose of art is to portray human emotions. The motion picture has possibilities in many ways greater than those of the stage. The stage has its limitations in many ways. What reader of 'Macbeth' has not longed to be thrilled at the sight of Birnam Wood come to Dunsinane? The coronation of Macbeth, only suggested in the play, is made a big scene in the film. "There has been tremendous advance made in the motion picture. For illustration, eight or ten good pictures were made of my performance of 'Henry VIII' and 'King John.' They were merely photographic transcripts of the stage production, entirely without meaning except to those who were perfectly familiar with the play and could recall the lines appropriate to the action. "Sir Tree has been in this country for the past few months, and on the Pacific coast made a film version of Shakespeare's 'Macbeth.'"

David Belasco announces a new Chinese play from the pen of Almee Grece Abbott, a well-known literary light of the Metropolis, who has never before turned her pen to writing for the stage.

LOCAL THEATERS

John Barrymore will be seen in "The Lost Bridegroom" to-day and to-morrow. It is said to be one of the most laughable and most thrilling stories in which he has ever appeared.

Ernie Joyce, the role assumed by Barrymore, is a young society chap, who is stunned when struck on his head by a man returning from his bachelor dinner on the eve of his marriage to Dorothy Hardin. The thieves that the man would make an excellent gentleman burglar, adding "class" to the gang, so he is trained in the art of burglary.

The papers are full of the disappearance of young Joyce and the deceptions presented over which the near-bridal is pictured as weeping. It looks like a rich haul to the gang, and Joyce is sent with two other men to rob his fiancée's home. They get inside the house, and when Dorothy interrupts the work, Joyce instinctively shields her from the blow of one of the crooks. The thug attacks Joyce and the two men engage in a desperate battle during the course of which they fall down a flight of stairs. Joyce lands on the bottom at the foot of the stairs and is stunned. The police arrive and a doctor is immediately summoned for Joyce. He declares that a very minor operation will completely restore Joyce's memory, and when it has been performed, Joyce has no knowledge of his excursion into the underworld.

After to-day's performances, the Majestic show will leave Harrisburg. The attractive headliner scheduled for the remainder of the week, is "The Luck of a Totem," a big scenic operetta presented by Harry Girard and Company. A male sextet supplies a great deal of the harmony during the act, while the beautiful stage setting representing the arctic regions. Other acts surrounding the headliner are Julia Curtis, singing comedienne; Dealy and Kramer, man and woman in a comedy singing and talking act, and LaBelle and Williams, who do a novelty singing, dancing and aerial act.

The Victoria to-day presents "The Mysteries of Myra," third episode of the film mystery is found. "The Mysteries of Myra" is one of the most gripping and most interesting of the Victoria Today that compels one's closest attention at all times. As the story goes on each part grows more interesting than the preceding one. Howard Estabrook, as the doctor who is making a study of the mysterious seances, was never seen to better advantage than in this picture; Jean Southern, cast as Myra, is also seen at her best. Helen Holmes, the screen's most fearless star, is also shown in another thrilling episode of "The Girl and the Game." To-morrow Edna Mayo in "Salvation Joan."

WOULD END UNDERSELLING

Senator Borah Introduces Bill For Control of Articles of General Class Special to the Telegraph
Washington, D. C., May 17. — A bill to enable manufacturers to prevent underselling of their products by retailers was introduced by Senator Borah. It stipulates that in order to take advantage of its provisions the vendor, manufacturer or producer shall not have control of the market for articles of the same general class as those to be sold, nor shall he be a party to any combination of manufacturers of similar articles. Power to fix a fair price would be given to the Federal Trade Commission, with the right of access to books and secret processes and formulas of manufacturers. The bill would permit sales at reduced prices only after the goods had been offered back to the manufacturer at the original price.

LIME PAYS WELL SAYS AN EXPERT

People Should Use Care in Putting Lime on Soil Not Well Drained

"In Northwestern Pennsylvania many farmers are using lime on the soil, some of them paying high prices for the lime," says J. T. Campbell, soil and farm crop expert of the Department of Agriculture, who has returned from an extensive tour of the State.

"Occasionally I meet a man who says lime has made no improvement in his crops. I have several times observed the same condition on farms that I am well acquainted with. There is a reason for this. One reason is applied to soil that is primarily in need of drainage and which cannot be profitably farmed till drained, is largely a waste of money and effort. If the land were thoroughly tile drained, and then the lime applied, the returns for the lime would be the very best. "Again I meet farmers who are using lime in an effort to overcome the effects of poor farming and of destructive methods of handling the soil. My experience is that the use of lime must be accompanied by better methods in order to be profitably used."

CLOVER WEEVIL MAKING TROUBLE

Latest Pest to Be Heard From Causes Some Anxiety Among Farmers

The State Department of Agriculture has received several inquiries recently from farmers in the eastern counties about a worm working upon the clover. The specimens submitted with these letters show that the damage is being done by the larvae of the Clover Leaf-weevil.

As yet there is no successful method of controlling this pest, but the following methods will alleviate the trouble to some extent. Lightly pasturing the clover will dispose of many of the insects for they will either be eaten by the stock or be killed by tramping. Lightly clipping the clover with the mowing machine will also help, but it has the disadvantage that it is possible for the worms to live sometime or until new growth has started, by feeding upon the clippings that have fallen to the ground. Turning under red clover, after the second season also materially reduces the pest. There is seldom a bad attack two years in succession because of a fungus disease which attacks the insect. If it were not for this disease our clover fields would undoubtedly be ruined each year by the insect.
