Big Ed Walsh Still Drawing His Salary

Ed. Walsh, the big spitball pitcher who once terrorized American League teams, still draws a fat salary from owner Comiskey of the White Sox. Walsh pitched two or three games last year while in 1914 he was paid for a similar amount of work. But in spite of a weak arm, Comiskey has refused to turn him loose, at the same time feeling sure that the big fellow after a long rest will regain his effectiveness. Walsh went East with the White Sox with no idea of taking part in a game. He has been allowed to visit his home in Connecticut for a few days and will join the team again in Boston. Rowland says that Walsh will be asked to pitch as soon as weather conditions are more favorable.

WELLYS CORNER

Weather conditions have been anything but favorable for baseball. Minor leagues are having trouble in getting crowds that pay, and it will be a case of paying out the cash until warm weather comes. It is necessary to have something extraordinary these days in baseball sport to get the fans out, according to a general belief.

Local baseball patrons have had little opportunity to see the Harrisburg State league bunch at work. The opening game was a big disappointment to many, but an allowance was made because of lack of time to get into shape. Since the opening date weather conditions have been unfavorable. However, a general opinion prevails that Harrisburg needs some new players. According to Manager George Cockill they are on the way, sooner the better if the game is to be made a paying proposition.

The Brelsford A. C. opens the season to-morrow afternoon at Rutherford Heights. Players are requested to report at headquarters, Seventh and North streets at 1 o'clock. It is planned to have a little heart to heart talk between manager and players. The game promises to be interesting.

The Victor baseball club of Elizabeth wants games. The average age of players on the team is from 13 to 21 years. This is a new club, but made up of good material and according to reports is a strong attraction. Paul Bricker is manager of the team and is anxious to get in communication with local managers.

R. A. Look manager of the Lingletown A. C., wants a game for Decoration Day afternoon. He received a cancellation yesterday and is ready to take on a strong attraction. Lingletown has a good lineup, and is a real baseball town. Manager Look is offering good inducements for a strong team.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS
Theodore Dreiser, American author, who has contributed "The Genius" to the list of successful novels of the present era, has had a film made of the "best seller."

Announcement comes from the Selig Company that the winter season is to be made a weekly feature which will be called "The Athletic Feature Film Series." Each week a different sport is recognized and legitimate sport, and will show athletes such as Willard, Gould, Fred, and other champions of practically every sport.

The most engaging screen combination of the week is the immortal Casey and his equally immortal immortalizer, DeWolf Hopper. The famous star has made the famous baseball verses thousands of times in the flesh and millions of times through the phonograph. The film is a real baseball triumph and legitimate sport, and will show athletes such as Willard, Gould, Fred, and other champions of practically every sport.

The Majestic's bill for the last half of the week opens with the Four Flying Valerians and two women — who Bill Reviewed do aerial stunts. Most notable is the one called "The Triangle Play" based on "Casey at the Bat," have just been photographed. Paul Bricker is manager of the team and is anxious to get in communication with local managers.

For seventy hours the stricken trenches were furrowed and ripped asunder. A soldier there lay waiting. Dazedly he recalled "the friendship." Its strange beginning; in the steerage; bound for America. Its gradual ripening during those three years together; toiling on the subway job.

Then insensate, unreasoning war between their two fatherlands had dragged each home as "reused." "How strange," he mused; "we are enemies now." Suddenly he began to fire rapidly into the billowing smoke.

The enemy were almost on them. A bayonet tore soggly through his breast—he fired wildly—point-blank—then saw it was his friend. Limply his friend's body fell across his face.—The Christian Herald.

A UNIQUE HONEYMOON.
While there have been many books written upon the wage question and the problem of living, it is doubtful if any research has had such unusual inspiration as that conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Chase, an account of which is given in their book, "A Honeymoon Experiment." The usual custom of beginning married life in a glamor of many gifts and unusual luxuries did not appeal to either of these young people. They thought that their best foundation would be a clear knowledge of the earning capacity of each and of the conditions which must be met by the untrained wage earner. They, therefore, decided to spend six weeks of their honeymoon in Rochester, where neither had any friends or acquaintances, and to live during those six weeks entirely on what they were able to earn.

In their book their accounts are given separately, so that it sets forth the experiences and conclusions of both the man and the woman in this most unusual experiment.

THE ROSE ANNUAL.
Rose-lovers will be interested in J. Horace McFarland's editorial in the 1916 issue of the "Rose Annual," published by the American Rose Society. Mr. McFarland says: "The United States has not been prominent in rose-hybridizing, as may be understood when it is noted that out of a variety of roses listed in the 1914 official catalogue of the National Rose Society of England, covering the good roses of all the world, but 26 are of American origin—less than 5 per cent."

From this statement it would seem that rose-growers in this country have been quite backward in developing that beautiful flower, and the American Rose Society deserves hearty commendation for the good work it has done and is doing. Membership in this Society is really to be coveted, for only members of the Society get a copy of the "Rose Annual," with its vast fund of information. The editor of the "Annual," J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa., states that he will be glad to forward full details about the Society, its work and its aims to all who are interested.

GOOD MUSIC FOR
H.B.G. NEXT WINTER

Gadski, Margaret Wilson, Ysaye, Godowsky, Destinn in Friday Evening Recitals

Harrisburg is promised a series of musical events for the winter of 1916-17 that will mean much for the popularity of this city as a point on the musical circuit of the country, if the proposed schedule is supported and carried out.

A Friday evening musical course has been arranged, with the following well-known names as attractions on the successive Friday evenings of November 3, 17, Dec. 8, January 12, and February 2; Mme. Johanna Gadski, dramatic soprano, about whom there has recently arisen such a furor on the question of her singing in the Yale Bowl at the commencement exercises because she is the wife of an alleged German spy; Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the President; Leopold Godowsky, famous pianist; Euzen Ysaye, eminent Belgian violinist, and Miss Emmy Destinn, lyric soprano.

The success of the past season along the lines of the better class of musical events has proven that Harrisburg likes and wants good music. Such a course as the one suggested, at a cost of $10 for the entire series, ($5 for upstairs seats to accommodate students) augurs well for next winter's attractions, and it is to be hoped that they will be heartily supported. The course will be given at the Orpheum Theater under the management of Gayle Burlingame.

Bressler Goes to Newark;
Fails to Show Real Form

Rube Bressler, than whom there was not a more promising southpaw in the land in 1914, has been sent back to the minors by Connie Mack to correct his losing ways. Bressler, a former Harrisburger, yesterday was released to the Newark club of the International League. Accompanying the so-called veteran of the Mack pitching staff to Fred Tenney's Internationals is Tom Healey, the former Pittsburgh collegian, who looked like a regular third baseman for ten days last season. Both had iron-clad "war time" contracts with the Athletics or they probably would have been shipped to the minors sooner.

Bressler's failure is a mystery to Mack. He joined the Athletics in the Fall of 1913 and was touted as a successor to Eddie Plank, the grand old veteran now with the St. Louis Browns. Plank taught Bressler his blinding cross-fire and found the "Rube" an apt pupil.
