William S. Essick Urges Boys and Girls to Be Kind to Feathered Folk

Before a large audience of boys and firls in the Harrisburg Public Library auditorium this afternoon, William S. Essick gave an illustrated talk on "Birds and Bits of Nature, Kindness to All and Cruelty to None." Mr. Essick who has spent much time in studying lard lore showed striking pictures of bird life in this vicinity and in some of the other parts of the country. He told the boys and girls that his first equipment was a jackknife and a five-dollar camera, and then gave intreasting information about the methods of getting pictures of bird life in this vicinity and in some of the other parts of the country. Freaks in birdlife, and birds making faces added to the humor of the little talk, which was interspersed with views of the homes of great nature lovers, and pictures of a number of persons noted for their study of birds. Mr. Essick also gave the boys and girls the names of authors and books dealing with nature study and then gave a short account of butterfiles and moths before closing his address.

Uneeda Biscuit

For that before-bedtime hunger there's nothing more nourishing, more satisfying, more digestible, than Uneeda Biscuit. Soda crackers are a most nourishing flour food—the most easily digested. Uneeda Biscuit are the best soda crackers-naturally, then, it stands to reason that Uneeda Biscuit are best adapted to the bedtime meal. Always fresh, crisp and good.

ment of Their Plot.

"The dirty hounds!" said Burnett. as he sank into a chair. "Oh. I'll get even with them now, if it's the last thing I ever do! Twenty years I've worked for them—and today they gave me two weeks' notice."

"Father!" cried Mary, and burst into tears. "Whatever are you going to do?"

"Live better than we ever have!" he snarled. "I've got a way to get even! I handle the racing wires! By the arrangement with all the pool-rooms we hold the results back for ten minutes—out I know them. I'll find some one to go and bet—and give me half the winnings. I'll telephone him the winner—and he'll place his bet. His horse will have won already—but the pool-rooms won't know it! There's enough to make up for all I've done in one big killing!"

"By Jove! Sounds good!" said Gerry. "I might take a flyer myself, you know."

Then there had to be explanations.

"I might take a flyer myself, you know."

Then there had to be explanations. Burnett was distrustful, but he weakened when Mona, his daughter's friend, vouched for Gerry.

"Well—we'll try it tomorrow." he said. "I'll slip Mary here the word on one race, and you can put down a small bet, if you like. If it goes all right we'll pull off a big one the next day!"

"You're sure there's no risk of losing?" said Mona. "I wouldn't care so much for myself, but I'd hate to think Mr. Gerry—" "Don't you worry about me!" boast-ed Gerry. "I've cut my eye teeth, little gir!"

He was delighted to be associated with Mona in an enterprise of this sort. It seemed to him more of a hold on her than he had ever had before, and that, if this went through she would find it much more difficult to maintain their relationship on a formal plane. And he thought, too, that what he had seen was enough to prove that there was a possibility of deception. It was the evidence of his own eyes that he relied upon. And it was upon exactly this fact that they had all counted.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.
