

OF INTEREST TO THE WOMEN

"THEIR MARRIED LIFE"

"Warren, I heard of an awfully sad case to-day," said Helen as they settled themselves in the cozy living room after dinner.
"Was that kind of a case?" said Warren, not much interested. He had eaten heartily and did not feel talkative. Besides, he was weary and did not want to be bothered.
"Is the kind of a tale that happens once every so often. Do you remember the little dressmaker I had last year—the one who made those little dresses for Winifred?"
"Was the little one who came and asked for her money one evening?"
"Was, Mrs. Stevens was telling me about her to-day. It seems that she has been tentatively engaged for several years. He has been her one solace, her one recreation and she lived for his visits to New York, for they were the only periods of fun she had."

"I should think that you and Mrs. Stevens could think of some way to help her get work. Isn't there something original that you could try? The woman sews well enough, doesn't she?"
"Yes, very well. The trouble is that she hasn't enough initiative to go ahead and try new things."
"Why don't you help fix her place up? You might add some gimcracks of some kind, and give her a French name."
Helen threw down her embroidery and looked at Warren for a moment. Then she sprang up and threw her arms about his neck.
"A Clever Idea. Warren Curtis, you're a dear. Of course we can do that. It's a wonderful idea. I don't see how you happened to think of it. Of course, we'll do that. We'll give her a real name de plume and just make her branch out. Mrs. Stevens and I can spread it around that we have made a discovery, and we can set her to copying some imported models. All that she needs is a little assurance."
"Very, buy some copies of the latest fashion magazines; they certainly feature wild enough models for anyone."

Story No. 5

The Millionaire Plunger

Plot by George Bronson Howard. Novelization by Hugh G. Weir. Copyright Kalem Company.

She handed Gerry the slip of paper she had held in her hand as she came, and he took it, glancing at the name of the horse. They hurried on to the pool room, and found that they were only just in time.
"Take mind, boss," cried Mona, pushing him aside. "On the same horse!"
The bets were placed. Almost at once the story of the race began to come in. They had bet on Hallo—Hallo was off to a flying start, and set the pace through the early stages of the race. And then, just at the end, another horse, Chimes, the favorite, swept up and won by a nose. Hallo was second—and they had lost!
"We win—we win!" cried Mona. "The odds for place were five to one!"
"Your never said place—we bet to win," said Mary, finding her voice suddenly.
"Your bet to win?" rejoined Mona, her face white. "I said place—place—not to win!"

With a Muffled Cry Mona Flung Herself on the Other.

a muttered cry, Mona flung herself on the other, whipping out a long pin from her hat. It gleamed in the light. Mary staggered back, and something else gleamed. It was a tiny revolver Mary had pulled from her muff. Before the crowd could interfere, or even cry out, there was a sharp report, a little swirl of smoke, and Mona sank to the floor, a red stain gathering on her temple.
"Ohi!" shrieked Mary, "I have killed her!"
Gerry, starting in horror, suddenly remembered his own plight. It would be ruinous to be involved in a murder. He dashed for the door. But two of the "cappers" held him back.
"Wait, young man! We'll need you when the police arrive!"

The words added to Gerry's growing dismay. He darted another glance at the prostrate girl on the floor, but it was not of her he was thinking. All of his selfishness and baser instincts had come of the prostrate girl on the floor. He was concerned only with the thought of protecting himself. Desperately he thrust his hand into his pocket, and hurriedly scribbled a large check to "Cash!"

The crowd, around him hestitated. Mary was bent over Mona, sobbing pitifully. But at a sign from Deering the check was accepted.
"I'll take my chance," he said, "after it is cashed!"

And not until a messenger returned with a rubber-stamped check of bills was the white-faced Gerry suffered to depart. As the door closed his steps could be heard clattering wildly down the stairs.

At the sound of the scene in the pool room changed as by magic. With a little cry of relief, the "dead" girl, the floor scrambled to her knees, dabbing with her handkerchief at the red stain, which she had clapped to her temple.
"—Is he really gone?" she gasped.
"Mary threw her arms around her neck. You did it splendidly, dear! I really think you're a genius. The two joined in the hysterical laugh.
Mona turned to the man.
"Money and go. Here, take your help, but we won't need you any longer!"

"The very thing I am sorry for," said Mary a little later, as they were hurriedly packing up in their cosy apartment. "If we will have a move! But—we have made a splendid haul, haven't we, dear?"

The head and shoulders buried in trunk, nodded agreement.

A TEST OF WATCHES

By Frederic J. Haskin (Continued From Editorial Page)

grade watch is adjusted to run in either three or five positions, hence the necessity for this number of tests. These tests are made at a temperature of 84 degrees Fahrenheit, which is supposed to be the temperature of the watch pocket. In order to determine how heat and cold affect the instrument, it is also tested at 41, 68 and 95 degrees. Finally, its isochronism, or the uniformity of its rate throughout the day is determined.
This careful testing of timepieces shows them to be very delicate instruments—much more so than the average watch owner, or even the average jeweller, imagines. For example, the experts have found that when a watch is hung on a nail or hook, unless it rests firmly against something, its own power will set it swinging which will result in its gaining from eight to 130 seconds in 24 hours more than it would if at rest. Now jewellers almost invariably hang up the watches brought them for repair, and this may well explain the fact that frequently the watch runs all right when the jeweller has it, but when he gives it back to you it loses.
Most watch owners hardly deserve good service in return for the treatment they give their watches. Everyone knows, of course, that it is bad for a watch to be dropped, even a short distance. In point of fact, letting a watch fall to the end of a chain or dropping your vest on a chair with the watch in the pocket may throw it off, while jumping off a street car or any other sudden motion of the person, may cause a considerable inaccuracy. If you want the exact time, you should treat your watch with the utmost consideration, and comport yourself with careful dignity.

Here are a few more directions:

"What happened?"
"Why for him to arrange his affairs so that he could marry?"
"Ohi, he had promised to marry her!"
"Why, yes, dear, of course. He gave her a ring, a cheap little affair, but she thought it was wonderful."
"Will he be careful? But I simply must tell Mrs. Stevens, dear. I can't wait another minute."
"I suppose you'd like to begin to-night, wouldn't you?"
"Almost. Shall I ask the Stevenses to come over for a game of cards?"
"No, not to-night. I'm going to bed early. Now don't talk for half an hour. The telephone bill was too large last month, and I don't want another that size."
(Another instalment of this very human series will appear here soon.)

THE IVORY DOME IN BASEBALL

"Kid" Gleason, formerly assistant manager and general factotum of the White Sox, is noted for the sharpness of his repartee on the ball field. Manager Jennings, of the Detroit Tigers, had occasion to feel the sting of Gleason's tongue just before the veteran left the Chicago club. Hugnie, it must be remembered, has been involved in two serious accidents, each of which nearly terminated his career. First he dived into the swimming pool at Cornell when there was no water in it, breaking bones innumerable and having to stay in bed for weeks while the doctors patched him up. Later he drove his auto mobile off a bridge near Scranton and hurt himself so badly that he was in a hospital for a couple of months. Gleason, of course, knew all about these two accidents and when the time came he reminded Jennings of them in a way more pointed than polite.
The Detroit manager was coaching one afternoon and had taken occasion to make a number of extremely personal remarks to the Chicago pitcher. He plainly was "getting the stabman's goat" and Gleason was quick to come to the rescue.
"Why you reckless-faced ape," he yelled at Hugnie. "You have a fine chance to be kidding anybody. You tried twice to commit suicide and your skull was so thick you couldn't go through with it!"—The American Boy

Keep your watch pocket clean, and if the watch crystal is cracked or broken replace it immediately. Wind your watch regularly, steadily and slowly. It will improve the working of many watches to wind them twice a day. Compare your time daily with that of some standard clock. The best way is to make a practice of passing some clock set by the government observatory every morning on your way to work, and to wind and set your watch at exactly the same time every day.

Again, do not foppishly carry your watch in your upper coat pocket. It's too cold up there. Keep it in your watch pocket, close to the body in the equatorial regions, where it will get uniform heat at all times. Don't put it by the open window at night, either. It can catch cold as well as you can. Also be careful what position you put it in at night. If you are very observant, you can find out what its compensating positions are, so that by letting it stand up all day and lie on its face all night, for example, you may make it come out exactly right at the end of the 24 hours. If you can't find this compensating position, make the watch stand up all night, just as it does in the day.

U. S. TO POLICE SAN DOMINGO. Washington, D. C., May 23.—Rear Admiral Caperton, at Santo Domingo, is taking steps to distribute his land force of marines to various points in the little republic. The broadening of the marine patrol, officials indicated to-day, is a move preliminary to establishment of a policing system similar to that recently inaugurated in Haiti under the new Haitian treaty. A complete reorganization of the native troops is contemplated under the plan.

INVENTS RADIUM SCREEN TO GIVE LIGHT TO SIGHTLESS. Pittsburgh, May 23.—Ethan L. Dodds, chemical engineer of the American Vanadium Company, has invented a radium screen which he believes will enable the blind to see where the retina of the eye has not been entirely destroyed. He has applied for patents, but says this is only a precautionary step in the public's interest and that he will give the world the benefit of his discovery. He demonstrated his theory in the William Penn Hotel, blindfolding a

Today's Beauty Hint. It is not necessary to shampoo quite so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water. This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright lustre and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.
