WOMEN'S INTERESTS

Why I Never Married

Why do so many women who are attractive, intelligent, full of human affection and tenderness—the sort of women who were designed by nature to make ideal wives and mothers—never marry?

Is it because they were bent on celibacy? Or is it because men were they saw it, and so passed them over? Or is it the fault of social conditions that never gave them their matrimonial chance?

It is one of life's great puzzles, and in an attempt to solve it, Dorothy Dix has asked a number of charming old maids why they never married.

BY DOROTHY DIX

"The reason that I am an old maid," said the first woman, "is because custom and convention forbid a woman from picking out her mate. If I had been permitted to pose the question I should now be a nice old grandmother, knitting pink baby socks, instead of a lonely old spinster trying to fill in her life with vicarious interest in 'causes'."

"Of course I had plenty of chances to marry. Every woman who isn't a freak can marry if she will take what she can get, but, as the children say, I was 'choicy.' I knew exactly the kind of a man I wanted for a husband, and if I couldn't get him I preferred to do without one."

"So I am an old maid because the men who proposed to me wouldn't have as a gift, and the man I wanted, I didn't have the courage to propose to myself."

A Common Cause

"I think my case is a very common one. There are many women like myself who have a high ideal of what marriage should mean. To them it should be a real mating, a union of heart and soul. They would rather wait before their names are put on the list of brides than to compromise on a makeshift. They would rather wait until they have the opportunity of marrying for a home, or support, or for the privilege of writing 'Mrs.' before their names."

"These women would be glad enough to marry if the right man came along, but when he doesn't they refuse to compromise on a makeshift. They would rather wait until they have the opportunity of marrying for a home, or support, or for the privilege of writing 'Mrs.' before their names."

"Now, the maddening thing to those of us who belong to this class of old maids is that they do not go through life searching for an impossible ideal."

of a man without ever finding him. The tragedy lies in the fact that we generally do find him, but convention doesn't allow us to grab him and run off home with him and be happy ever after.

"On the contrary, we have to stand helplessly by, feebly trying to wigwag to him the glad news that we think that he is it, and he sees us making signs and passes at him, but doesn't know the meaning of our signs. We mean enough to understand what our signs mean. Or perhaps he is so blind that he passes by without ever noticing us at all."

"You may say that if a man were in love with a woman he wouldn't want her to pick him out. Not at all. Only men of that attitude ever think of things for themselves. Everything else is suggested to them. Yet look how seldom the feminine sex ever chooses that are attractively presented to them! And they always end by thinking they originated the idea."

The One Man

"The same thing would hold good in matrimony. Besides, many a man who is really in love with a woman does not ask her to marry him because he thinks that she is above him in social station, or accustomed to more luxuries than he can give her."

"In my own case, the one man that I have met that I could have loved and would have been glad to have married was a poor chap, earning a small salary, and with a widowed mother and a house full of little brothers and sisters dependent on him."

"He was a frail, delicate fellow, with small talent for business, but with the most beautiful soul and the most brilliant mind I have ever met."

"There wasn't a taste, or thought, or idea that we didn't have in common, and I look back now upon my comradeship with him as the most beautiful episode in my life. I know that he was as much drawn to me as I was drawn to him, but he would never have married me because he had nothing to offer a woman but grinding poverty. And I couldn't say to him, 'I've got money, and strength, and health, and I'll love you, and mother you, and take your burden off your shoulders, and you'll get well and be happy ever after.'"

"No, I couldn't say that, because I was young and foolish, and bound down by tradition, and I let him go away from me and die. That's why I'm an old maid."

YOUNG BOY'S SUIT COMFY AND SMART

Try the Unbleached Linen, a Novelty of This Season For Boys' Clothing

By MAY MANTON

9054 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Boy's Suit, 4, 6 and 8 years.

Here is a boy's suit designed especially for summer needs. It is made with an open neck, the coat is simple and loose and the trousers are straight and free at the knees. They can be rolled up when wading is to be enjoyed and they are always comfortable and satisfactory.

In the illustration, striped galatea is shown but this is a suit that can be made from linen, from galatea, from chambray or from gingham for morning or for playtime or from pongee, linen or similar material for afternoon wear. Unbleached linen is being much used this season and is both attractive and durable. It is pretty with bands of blue and natural colored pongee is smart with the collar, cuffs and trimming of the same material in red or in blue. For the playtime suit stitched edges are all that are necessary but the bands make a good finish for the handsomer one.

For the 6 year size will be needed, 3 1/2 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 3/4 yards 26 or 2 1/2 yards 44.

The pattern, No. 9054 is cut in sizes for boys from 4 to 8 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

GERARD DEPRIVED OF AUTO

By Associated Press

London, June 1.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Daily Mail says that United States Ambassador James W. Gerard has been deprived of the use of his automobile through the refusal of the German Foreign office to permit the embassy to buy enough petrol to keep one car in service for three months. A request by the ambassador for permission to import petrol from abroad was met with the reply that military authorities felt compelled to confiscate any petrol found in Germany.

Don't Give Your Baby Medicine

Send for the doctor if the baby is really ill. Otherwise give your baby plenty of sunshine and air, soft fresh loose clothes, a daily bath, castor oil if you must—and be sure his food is right. It is almost always the food that's wrong when the baby is ill.

You know, if you cannot nurse your baby, he must have milk in some form. There is a way to give your baby all the good in cow's milk without subjecting his delicate stomach to the dangers that raw cow's milk so often carries. Thousands of mothers are finding the right way every day. They are bringing up their babies on
