WILSON LEADS BIG PREPAREDNESS PARADE

[Continued From First Page] raised his hat in response to cheers as he marched along between two district citizens, escorted by Secretary Tumulty, the White House employes and White House newspaper corre-

Ideal weather favored the demonstration. There was hardly a cloud in the sky and it was as cool as late Spring. Enthusiastic crowds thronged along the avenue from Peace Monu-ment to the White House.

In front of the White House the President left the line of march and took his place in a stand to review the parade. He was joined there by Mrs. Wilson and all the members of the cabinet now in the city.

Brilliant Decorations

Washington was brilliantly decorated for the occasion. It was a holiday, for under an executive order issued by the President all government employes were excused from work and many stores were closed. The and many stores were closed. The celebration was planned in part as a response to a proclamation issued by the President calling upon the people of the nation to celebrate flag day this year with special ceremonies.

The parade was planned as a strictly nonpartisan affair and was suggested by a Republican newspaper of Washington. Volunteering to participate in it were employes of many stores and shops, members of patrictic, philanthropic, religious and social organizations, many of the city's leading businessmen, cabinet officers, judges, school children and members of the Senate and House. There were many floats emphasizing preparedness.

of the Senate and House. There were many floats emphasizing preparedness.

Wilson Marches on Foot
President Wilson decided to set a precedent by walking on foot during the entire length of the parade. Former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt also had been invited but found it impossible to participate.

Beginning at the Peace Monument, near the Capitol building the line of march passes the post office and treasury department buildings and then reaches the White House, where a reviewing stand, draped with American flass, has been erected. There the program provided that the President should leave the head of the parade and enter the stand with the members of the executive committee. Arrangements had been made to have Mrs. Wilson and members of the cabinet join him to watch the remainder of the line pass by.

Soldiers Aid Police
To control the 'crowds, including visitors from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond and other nearby cities, the Washington police force had called for aid from soldiers from Fort Myer, Va., and marines and saliors from the Navy Yard here. Street car service along Pennsylvania avenue was suspended during the parade.

No regular military organizations were permitted to march because Secretaries Baker and Daniels thought it would be improper for professional soldiers or saliors to participate. The National Guard of the District of Columbia, the Washington high school cadets and several other military bodies were assigned to prominent places.

Officers in Civilian Clothes
Scretaries Baker and Daniels were out of the city attending the national convention at St. Louis, but other members of the cabinet marched at the head of employes from their departments. While no government employes were ordered to turn out a large proportion of the army and navofficers stationed here quietly arranged to parade in civilian clothes with the war and navy department divisions.

ed to parade in civilian clothes with the war and navy department divisions.

Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, was given a place in the first division led by the President's secretary, Joseph Tumulty, at the head of White House employes. Justice Pitney, of the United States Supreme Court, marched with a local club. American flags were distributed to every marcher just before the parade started.

Eleven Divisions

Nearly every band in Washington and Baltimore had been pressed into service and it was necessary to have some of them march by the reviewing stand several times in order to lead different organizations. The United States Marine band was placed just ahead of the President.

The parade was under the direction of Lieutenant-General S. B. M. Young, honorary grand marshal, and M. C. Hazen, grand marshal, and M. C. Hazen, grand marshal, it was divided into eleven divisions, one of which was designated for negro citizens and organizations.

Wilson Speaks Late

By permission of the Navy Department, the navy wireless station at Arilington, Va., had been used to invite all radio operators in Washington and vicinity to participate in the celebration and the responses resulted in a special section being set aside for them.

With most of the marchers parading sixteen abreast, the committee in charge of the arrangements estimated that the last contingents would pass the raviewing stand late in the after-
