DIXON TALKS OF SUMMER DANGER

Gives Some Ideas How to Avoid Infection, Especially of the Children

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Commissioner of Health, calls attention to the dangers which attend the summer vacation and especially urges that parents and others in charge of children see that they are not subject to infection. Dr. Dixon points out many ways in which a person may become sick.

In his talk the commissioner says: "The summer travel season has arrived. Thousands of mothers and children will soon be on their way to the country and the seashore.

"Observation would seem to justify the statement that the majority of mothers traveling with small children fortify themselves against possible contingencies by providing cakes, sweets, fruit or something edible to pacify their youngsters.

"Every traveler is familiar with the sight of infants of various ages engaged in feeding themselves. Despite the efforts to keep the aisles and seats of passenger coaches clean, they become soiled by contact with dirty boots.

"Children are quite commonly permitted to play or creep over the car floor and seats and then stick their fingers and toys and any available food into their mouths. It is obvious to the most casual observer that this is an exceedingly unclean habit. It is likewise a dangerous one. Disease-breeding bacteria are carried directly into the mouths of these children in this fashion. This makes it easy to understand how babies and little children often contract consumption—tuberculosis.

"No one should eat without first washing the hands. The possibility of contaminating food by handling with dirty fingers is great. When children are too young to understand this, their mothers or nurses should be careful to prompt them to eat until their hands are washed."

NEWS OF STEELTON

STEELTON BOOSTERS ENTHUSE OVER FUTURE

perintendent L. E. McGinness of the borough schools; Frank B. Wickersham, borough solicitor; Quincy Bent, general manager of the Pennsylvania Steel company's local plant, and the Rev. George N. Lauffer, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church.

Each speaker told how in his opinion Steelton could be made a bigger, better and busier borough and several described the growth of the town during its thirty-six years of existence.

It was the most successful banquet ever held by Steelton civic workers and reflected the spirit of optimism for the borough's future that is held by every man in the town. When Superintendent McGinness traced, step by step, the development of the borough from a little settlement of 2,000 people on the edge of a deep, miasmatic marsh to its present state of municipal excellence, there was round after round of applause.

The only guest during the big affair was when Toastmaster Davis referred to the late Harry C. Wright, president of the Municipal League, and who did much to place Steelton in her present place.

Ovation For Quincy Bent When Quincy Bent, the almost youthful manager of the big steel plant, expressed his pleasure at returning to the town of his birth and predicted a bright future for the borough, he was given an ovation.

Some of the older men present declared that they do not recall any occasion upon which a speaker received such a hearty greeting since the days when the late Major Luther S. Bent, father of the present general manager, was the directing head of the big steel plant.

It was Major Bent, declared Toastmaster Davis, who conceived the idea of a larger, better Steelton. It was his faculty for selecting the right man for the right place that resulted in the borough's present success. He declared, and gave impetus to the movement for municipal improvements.

Repeatedly throughout the evening speakers referred to the late Major Bent and told of his love for Steelton and his efforts to make it grow, and every time his name was mentioned there was wild applause.

When the present Mr. Bent was introduced, however, it was evident that the ovation was for him, not as the son of his father, or the nephew of his uncle, but as—Quincy Bent.

Plans Are Big Says Bent When General Manager Bent expressed his faith in Steelton's future, the applause silenced the speaker; when he declared "big things are planned for the borough," there was bedlam.

"I have come back to my native town to live," declared Mr. Bent. "This is to be my home and I want to see it just as large and just as fine a borough as possible."

Speaking of the future of the big steel plant upon which the borough is dependent he said: "While I am not at liberty to discuss the plans of the new owners for the steel plant here, you may be assured that they have their plan. I can't tell you yet just what it is but you may be satisfied that it is something big."

Latch String Always Out Mr. Bent stated that he desires to do all in his power to make the town grow and prosper and asked for the co-operation of its citizens. "I am very young," said he, "but I have learned that if I am to succeed, I need loyalty, confidence and co-operation—and this is what I ask you to give me. I want you all to understand," he continued, "that my latch string is always out when any of you wish to come to me with any matter that has to do with the welfare of Steelton."

These remarks were the signal for another ovation, an ovation that was checked only when the speaker signalled his desire to proceed, but which broke out anew when he concluded telling a little story about a foreigner who wished to bestow upon his youngest son one of the nicknames of the open hearth department.

Regrets From Schwab and Grace

Mr. Bent announced that Charles M. Schwab and E. G. Grace, chairman of the board of directors and president respectively of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, had asked him to present their regrets that they were unable to be present because of Mr. Schwab's slight illness and Mr. Grace's recent duties at the present time. They had further requested, he said, that he inform those present that Messrs. Schwab and Grace were looking forward to the time when in the near future they might have all present as their guests at a similar affair.

Mr. Bent's speech was the feature of the evening and at the conclusion of the banquet he was kept shaking hands and receiving congratulations and wishes. His memory seemed excellent and when old schoolmates and boyhood acquaintances came up, nearly all were greeted with the old boyhood nickname that he wore when few indeed who needed the formality of an introduction.

McGinness Tells of Growth

Steelton's history since its incorporation in 1880 was recalled by Prof. McGinness, who told how the present excellent paved streets, filtered water, parks and playgrounds were obtained.

Frank B. Wickersham, borough solicitor, explained how the merchants had advanced and told how council is now struggling with the knotty problem of how to abandon the old Pennsylvania canal.

Mr. Wickersham declared that, contrary to law, the borough had been draining its surface water into this stream and how now it would be necessary for the borough to spend $72,000 if it desired to build a sewer from Lockport to the town. He then asked the merchants to suggest some solution to the problem.

Bank Employees Guests

The final speaker was the Rev. George N. Lauffer, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, another real borough "booster." He told of the advantages of community optimism and since the reverend is quite an optimist he was given an ovation, convincing the banqueters that optimism applied to a community is one of its greatest assurances of growth and success.

The banqueters represented every business and profession in the borough. One of the groups that attracted attention was a party of eleven employees of the people's Bank who sat together and were the guests of the president, W. H. Nell.

The committee in charge was showered with congratulations upon the success of the affair and deserved all the praise they received. There wasn't a single slip in the arrangements. Members of this committee included: W. H. Nell, Walter Keister, C. S. Davis, G. M. Long, W. F. Maginnes and M. J. Kane. The latter, in behalf of the Highways Light and Power Company, supplied the big electric American flag that waved at the head of the banquet table.

Among the guests were: H. A. Keister, W. L. Messinger, O. C. Bishop, R. M. Frey, F. A. Steen, H. Messinger, A. Fletcher, Dr. R. M. C. Hursh, Ross Frey, Dr. M. O. Pott, Dr. W. H. Seibert, Dr. J. R. Plank, Mark

NEW HIGH SCHOOL SPEAKERS' THEME

more college, in his address to the class, declared that Mr. Widder's oration should be delivered at every street corner in the city. He then went on to emphasize the value of education to the community and to the State and nation. Dr. Swain spoke of the importance of thinking for oneself and said that the advanced national citizenship would eventually develop into international feeling, and that the European War would probably end with the formation of the United States of Europe similar to this nation. He urged the students to become citizens of the world in feeling closing his address with an appeal to them to take advantage of their educational opportunities.

A. Carson Stamm, president of the school board of the city, just before he presented the 148 students with their diplomas, said that the campaign had already been started for a new high school and commended the valedictorian for his address in behalf of a better institution.

Miss Yoder in her essay stated that abolition of education would be a step backward educationally in the city, and taking it for granted that the city would have a new high school soon, she advanced numerous arguments for the continuation of the system. She declared that by separating the sexes, boys and girls have false ideals of each other; lose self-control and lose a chance for improvement in manners and morals.

Mr. Widder in his oration took as the subject, "Devoutly to be wished." He said that preparedness educationally was the welfare of the city, State and nation, and that voters of Harrisburg missed one opportunity to give High School students this advantage. He told of the big expenditures of the city for public improvements to parks, the River Front, streets and then stated that this money was properly invested for the good of the city, but that the people failed to remember that the money for the advancement of education was a far better one for the good of the community.

John Horace Nunemaker spoke on "What's What" and gave an interesting comparison of the value of classical and technical school training. Miss Marjorie Quay Hause, in her essay, appealed for the preservation of wild flowers, and Miss Florence Hubley Rinkenbach spoke on mythological subjects. Prayer at the opening of the program was offered by the Rev. Dr. George Edgar Hawes, pastor of Market Square Presbyterian Church, and music was furnished by the school orchestra, directed by Prof. George W. Updegrave. Karl Peters presented the $15 prize of the class of 1915 to Mr. Widder, and John C. Pastor, the $15 prize of the class of 1907 to Miss Yoder.

Despite the rain this morning the students poured in, arriving in automobiles decorated with the class colors. After the commencement exercises, many of them rode about the city and took short trips to the Liverpool way. The total number returned from a two-day tour of Washington.

Natural Outlet From Newport to Amity Hall Declares C. H. Lehr

As a means toward "preparedness," Newport folks last night told representatives of the William Penn Highway, the selection of the Amity Hall-Newport route from Harrisburg to Millerstown will make it possible for the United States or Pennsylvania governments to transport war equipment and bodies of troops east and west in Pennsylvania in less time and at less expense than over either of the other two proposed William Penn routes in Perry county.

Nearly two hundred prominent citizens of Newport, Liverpool, New Bloomfield and Duncannon attended the Newport meeting last evening. Scheduled originally for the borough building, the gathering became so large for that building and was moved to Centennial hall. Prior to the meeting, William Jennings, president of the William Penn board of governors, with Secretary M. H. James of Harrisburg and the Messrs. Duncannon and Wills of Duncannon, motored over considerable Perry county mileage. Despite the all-day rain they rounded the highways in very good condition.

Jennings Presides Mr. Jennings presided at the meeting and told just what the William Penn Highway Association is and what it intends to do. Then C. H. Lehr of Newport told what the Newport people want. He spoke, he said, for the "natural outlet" from the Juniata valley. There were two other routes, he said—that through Liverpool and the one through New Bloomfield. Newport people believed, he said, that the logical route was from Newport to Amity Hall, connecting at the latter place with the Liverpool road. That route, he said, would make the William Penn six miles shorter than the New Bloomfield route and 12 miles shorter than the Liverpool way. The total elevation on the New Bloomfield road, he said, is 780 feet; on the Liverpool

TO TAKE OFF FLESH AND REDUCE WEIGHT

Eat Plenty of Wholesome Food, But Breathe Deeply and Try a Little Oil of Korein With Meals.

Some people seem to be able to eat whatever they please without its increasing their weight to any degree, while on the other hand other folks, inclined to stoutness, try to eat lightly of the so-called fleshmaking foods but keep gaining weight all the time. Such a condition is both unnatural and dangerous but can often be quickly overcome by practicing deep breathing in the open air. The blood of the average overstuffed person seemingly fails to accept enough oxygen to consume the excessive fatty material in the food. But frequent open air deep breathing forces additional oxygen into the system, largely overcoming this defect and preventing further increase in weight. Then if this deep breathing plan is accompanied by the use of a little oil of korein, taking a few drops in a capsule with each meal and again before going to bed, it becomes possible to greatly reduce the weight even in a very few days.

The best feature of this reducing method is that it is absolutely safe and unlike so many flesh reducing systems, produces no weakening effects. In fact there are those who have tried it who say it almost seemed that they gained in strength with every pound of excess fat they lost.

The use of oil of korein is intended to eliminate the need of weak purgatives, sweating processes, dangerous drugs, starvation diets or the various forms of violent exercises which in many use in a vain effort to reduce flesh. Instead, oil of korein operates in a natural and wholly harmless way to gently reduce the excessive accumulations of fat wherever they exist on your body while the oxygen you are breathing into your system from the pure out door air not only helps the action of the korein but is helpful in preventing a return of the unnatural fat.
