TELEGRAPH PICNIC TO BE ANNUAL EVENT

CAPTAIN FRANCIS H. HOY, SR., Who Introduced Miss Sterrett.

venture and the Telegraph in arranging its plans didn't know whether 200 or 2,000 youngsters would have to be accommodated, consequently the details had to be worked out by estimate rather than by hardpan figures. In the future the committees which will have charge of the outing will just know what to do—and the committees will be appointed early next April to work up the program. Just here, possibly, is a good chance for the Telegraph to tell its readers how much it appreciated the help of those who volunteered to make the outing the success it was. The assistance of H. O. Beck, the property man for Paxtang park, was especially valuable. The Telegraph's thanks, by the way, includes concessionaries at Paxtang. They contributed some of the prizes.

"The Big Day" in last evening's Telegraph. Because of Father Time and the mail trains wait for no man, not nearly all the details of that gathering could be told. So here are some more of them.

"First of all there was the vaudeville show. It was just the kind of a show that you'd enjoy if you're a 'kid'—and even the grown-ups waited round to see, too. It was specially arranged for the youngsters. Tumbling, acrobatics, juggling, comic dancing—they were all on the program. And did the small spectators enjoy the program? Just ask em.

During that time the peanuts were distributed. Little Marjorie Sterrett, the "Battleship Girl," and special guest of the Telegraph, distributed them, bagful upon bagful. And how those peanuts did disappear! Half a ton were given out—and eaten—in scarcely no time.

The Governor Meets "Old Cronies" After the show there was a brief luncheon while the picnicers opened some thousands of well-stuffed lunch baskets. And at 3:30 the crowd—all that could, at any rate—gathered in the theater auditorium to hear Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh and to formally meet Miss Sterrett.

Shortly after 3:30 o'clock President A. Carson Stamm of the School Board, introduced Governor Brumbaugh. Governor Brumbaugh, President Stamm explained, is one of the great educators and that he is ever at his best when he is deep in the solution of that problem that lies nearest his heart—the education of the school children of the State and nation.

The Tale of Two Shirts In reply Governor Brumbaugh got the youngsters in rare good humor by greeting them as "his old cronies." The school he places above any institution, he said, and its problems are always interesting. He emphasized the importance of the public school and told a story of two shirts. One was of the boy who always backed away at the approach of teacher or visitor. The Governor never could understand this peculiar action until one day he saw the boy hurrying down the steps, unconscious that anyone was looking. "Then," said the Governor, "I saw that the boy had only the front of a shirt—and he was too ashamed to let anyone see his bare back." The other incident referred to a boy who one day came to school in a little Porto Rican town—with a shirt much, much too big for him. "Inquiry developed the fact that the boy's one shirt was being washed and that his father gave the lad his," explained the Governor.

"These two boys, one with half a shirt, and one with a shirt too big, but who went to school anyway, are worth more than a dozen boys in silk shirts and stockings who loaf about on the street corners," vigorously declared the Governor. "Clothes do NOT make the man."

The Spelling Bee Then smiling little Miss Sterrett was led out upon the stage by Governor Brumbaugh and President Stamm introduced her to the big crowd of Harrisburg's youngsters.

Did you know Marjorie, by the way, is very much a Pennsylvania? Governor Brumbaugh mentioned that when he said that he knew her when she went to school in Philadelphia and he knows her teachers. Incidentally he said that she is a lineal descendant of the first Sterrett after whom "Sterrett's Gap," in the mountains across the river, is named.

Following the big time in the auditorium there was the spelling bee. Brains Vs. Brawn That was SOME bee. Hundreds of youngsters qualified and the way those "kids" spelled words was enough to make mere grown-ups gasp. Prof. J. J. Brehm, school supervisor, and a lot of teachers in the public schools helped make that a success. The hardest words that school youngsters have spelled in seven years were used and some of the spellers stood firm for fifteen or twenty minutes.

John Minnaugh, a former messenger for the Associated Press, won the first prize in the bee. He is a Harrisburg student. Minnaugh's work incidentally again demonstrated that old truth that brains will ever win out over brawn. Harris hadn't any athletes in the track meet, but with the points it scored in the spelling bee it managed to tie with the Camp Curtin and Pomeroy buildings at twenty points. And when the tie was decided by flipping a coin, Harris won the flip.

spelling bee, while Bernard Koplovitz, Forney, and Lena Lapler, Hamilton, were second and third respectively.

Following the "bee," there was a grand march of all the youngsters and some wonderful singing by a great chorus, lead by Prof. E. G. Rose. The day's program closed with a big meeting in the Majestic theater last evening when Miss Sterrett was formally presented to Harrisburg by Captain Francis H. Hoy, Sr., former commander of Post 58 and one of the leading officers of the State encampment of the Grand Army. In deference to Miss Sterrett Captain Hoy wore his Grand Army uniform.

"The End of a Perfect Day" In his own inimitable style Captain Hoy told the audience who Miss Sterrett is, and of the great movement— Uncle Sam—which she is heading. Then the envelopes for contributions to the battleship fund were distributed. And now this is nearly the end of the story.

At 9:23 last evening Miss Sterrett and her father left for New York and Captain Hoy went to the station with them. Just before Marjorie boarded the train, the veteran fighter of the war of more than fifty years ago, bent and—kissed Uncle Sam's niece.

2,000 IN BEAN CONTEST One contest on yesterday's program, in which girls participated, had an entry list of nearly 2,000. It was the bean-guessing feature. A quart jar filled with small beans was placed in the pavilion. Girls large and small, guessed on the number of beans in the jar. A committee counted the beans to-day and reported a total of 3,756. Miss Katherine Emanuel, 506 Cowden street, guessed 3,700. She received to-day as a prize a Japanese tea set.
