The German machine finally went to earth a few yards from the French lines without having been hit or damaged in any way; the German pilot had lost his head in the presence of the fantastic evolutions of his adversary and could only inquire after being made prisoner: "What in the world is that phenomenon that fell upon me?" Since that time Navarre has flown successfully in all the different machines in the French aviation service, mastering them all with equal ease and skill, and never failing to charge an enemy wherever he found him. His theory of the aerial combat is to go at his man, drive right at him regardless of the enemy's fire, paying attention only to his own.

Up to date Navarre has waged nearly fifty air battles.

A great many anecdotes were told of Navarre, some of them perhaps somewhat stretched, a few of them authentic. One of the latter relates to his fourth combat, which barely escaped getting him thirty days in prison. He had then already acquired the habit, which he still follows, of getting out before daylight and finishing his sleep in his machine, so as to be ready to take the air instantly when an adversary's machine is signaled. On this occasion his sid ran up crying: "There is a German coming up above." Navarre darted into the air above the river Marne and made straight for a big German two-seated biplane. He fired a dozen bullets at the pilot, who, in trying to shield himself, steered his machine abruptly to one side. Then Navarre placed nine bullets in the motor and the machine plunged toward the earth, but landed without accident. Navarre landed after it, and, running up just as gendarmes were taking the pilot and the observer away, invited them into a wineshop beside the gendarmes' headquarters to have a drink. The prisoners, sent to the rear, related the incident and the general commanding the army ordered Navarre, under close arrest for thirty days. The eccentric aviator's amusing explanation of the incident, however,

P. O. S. OF A. NOTES
 Washington Camp 713, West Fairview, met last evening and are getting a company of Pennsylvania Reserves in shape. Also passed a motion that every member should display the American flag during the military activities in this country.

Washington, Camp 8, Harrisburg, has agreed to pay the dues of all members who go to Mexico in the service. Also reported that the Pennsylvania reserves of this State were ready to serve the country at the call of President Wilson. The Camp approved of the request of the Mayor of this city and has instructed all members to display the flag. Company B of Camp 8 will meet for drill next Wednesday. The booster committee have about completed their plans for the Anniversary luncheon to be held July 19, 1916. Many members will be present at the unveiling exercises of the Molly Pitcher monument at Carlisle, Pa., on June 28, 1916.

THE EFFECT UPON BUSINESS OF A PRESIDENTIAL YEAR
 There is a respectable list of presidential years which have been seasons of unfavorable business. Such years as 1884, the "Blaine-Cleveland contest," or 1896 and 1900, the "Bryan years," will at once occur to mind as having been marked by financial and industrial disturbance. The "Roosevelt year," 1904, was a season of trade reaction and unsettled markets. When, however, the other electoral years in the series are examined, the precedent is not altogether so convincing. Notwithstanding a temporary atmosphere of hesitation in several of them most of the other presidential contests of the past generation have been accompanied with at least a satisfactory measure of business prosperity. DESTROYS HIS TENTH MACHINE
 Navarre Brings Down Eighteenth Unofficially; Known as "Enfant Terrible"

Paris, June (correspondence of the Associated Press).—Second Lieutenant Jean Navarre, of the French flying corps, has just been officially credited with destroying his tenth German machine. Unofficially, he has brought down eighteen; that is to say that, in addition to the ten machines, destruction of which has been verified by his superior officers, he is known to have sent eight more to earth behind the German lines under circumstances that justify the supposition that they were destroyed.

Navarre is the "enfant terrible," or pest, of the French flying corps, with eccentricities that keep his superior officers busy. He had seen most of the world at 18, and had just disembarked from Japan and taken a few lessons in aviation when the war broke out. Too young to be called to the colors regularly, he enlisted and was summoned to appear for medical examination; instead of responding he took the train for Saint-Cyr and told the officers there that he had been ordered to report to join the engineers. Together with a comrade that had received a pilot's license, he applied to be incorporated in that service. The captain examined the papers of the real aviator and passed him; then asked Navarre: "What do you want?" "Same as he," replied Navarre, and without further formality Navarre found himself on an 80-horsepower biplane at the front regulating the fire of artillery in November, 1914. It was a service that was little suited to his disposition; he called it "driving a taxi-auto" and showed his discontent by some fantastic evolutions on returning from an observation tour that resulted in his being sent to the rear. He presented himself at the aviation camp where men were being trained to fly the swift battle planes and was given opportunity to try one of them. His natural qualities as an acrobat of the air got him immediately one of these new machines.

Has Waged Fifty Fights
 He made his debut in the chase in March, 1915, and in his first expedition attacked one of the German machines that was the most redoubtable at that time, by his skill as a pilot alone dominating his adversary. He flew over him, looped the loop under him, sailed all around him, risking a dozen times to collide with him, yet never giving the German observer a chance to fire.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HERMAN PICKLE?
 HE'S SORE AT YOU.

I KNOW THAT BUT FER WHY?

HE SAID HE ASKED YOU THE BEST WAY TO COMMIT SUICIDE AND YOU TOLD HIM TO DO IT WITH GAS.

BUT HE DIDN'T DO IT - DID HE?

THAT'S IT - HE LIGHTED THE GAS AN FELL ASLEEP.

AN HE'S SORE AT YOU ON ACCOUNT OF HIS GAS BILL.
