Oil and Gas Fields of Tampico to Be Kept Open

Washington, June 23. — Despite alleged German activities in Mexico the fuel oil and gasoline fields in the Tampico district will be kept open by the United States, even in case of war with the Carranza government, it was declared here. It was also pointed out that the United States will not relax its demands for the conduct of submarine warfare in the event of hostilities with Mexico. Advisers received here from Mexico allege that the German representatives here have encouraged General Carranza and the officers of the de facto government in their opposition to United States troops remaining in that country. The form of encouragement was said to have been moral rather than material. The reports further declare that German citizens in Mexico are being treated with great consideration. Some Americans have taken advantage of the favors accorded German subjects by placing their property in the hands of German friends on leaving Mexico. DISTRICT C. E. RALLY

A district Christian Endeavor rally of the Dauphin County Christian Endeavor Union was held in the Reformed Church, of Hummelstown, last evening. The Rev. George E. Hawes, pastor of Market Square Presbyterian Church, this city, gave the opening address. He was followed by John E. McCullough, president of the Dauphin County Christian Endeavor Union, who spoke on the subject of the "State Christian Endeavor Convention." Harry Lautick, vice-president of the Hummelstown district, presided, and special music was given by the Harrisburg Christian Endeavor Church. Revenue Rush at Office of District Collector

The office of Revenue Collector Davis at Lancaster is a very busy one at present, but "the worst is yet to come." All revenue taxes are due before June 30 and the "last day" rush is assuming big proportions. Personal and corporation income taxes, as well as the special taxes on liquor dealers of all classes, manufacturers and dealers in cigars and tobacco, proprietors of theaters, moving picture shows and pool and billiard rooms, and all persons registering under the Harrison Narcotic law are due before July 1, and as almost 15,000 taxpayers are affected, the collector's office is crowded to the limit in taking care of the business. One of the best Hair Tonics and Dandruff Remedies can be prepared at home by getting a bottle of Jabiru Compound from your Druggist, and follow directions in package. Jabiru is an exquisitely refined preparation for application on the scalp. Used in proper manner it will supply the natural oil to the hair. It will effectually prevent the appearance of scalp disease and dandruff and falling out of hair. For sale by all Druggists—25c.—Adv.

"Oh, I see," continued Fuller curiously. "Quite an idea! Well, I don't mind if the young lady is willing to stand my society as perfectly an equal as to be introduced! But I am afraid she is not the kind you think!"

Julia crossed to where Mona was sitting and explained the situation to her. Mona rose from her chair, and seated herself on a chair, and for several moments she talked to her, and one would judge from the view of Fuller's chair that Mary was not in a receptive mood. In the end Mona walked back to Fuller's table.

"Julia told me Mr. Winters," she began, using the name under which Fuller selected to be known at the cafe, that you wished to meet the young lady at the opposite table."

"Of course, it is somewhat irregular, and the management insists that it know personally the persons who ask such a courtesy, so that I can vouch for them to the lady patrons. Julia tells me you are known here, and I have explained to Miss Goodman this fact, and asked if you cannot be introduced. She hesitated. I will be frank, but I am quite sure that she will be delighted to know you."

Fuller chuckled and the next moment was beaming his broadest smile, and bowing in his most gracious manner. Mary received him with just the right degree of hesitation and coldness.

When Mary Hartley chose, she could appear delightfully credulous and unscrupulous—she could carry out the deception in a way that increased her charm. On this occasion, she assumed the part of a young girl, anxious to see the gayer side of the city's life, but fearful of the fascination it held for her, and not at all certain as to whether she ought to remain in the cafe or go back to her apartment. She explained that she was from a small town in the upper part of the State, and had come to the city with the idea of studying art—that her folks were wealthy enough to allow her a generous income, but worried at the thought of her being in the great city alone, without a chaperone.

They danced once or twice and then Mary announced her intention of going home.

When they parted before the apartment building, where the two girls had their home-like little flat, Fuller prolonged his good-by, and said if he could call for her the next afternoon in his automobile, and take her for a drive through the park. She demurely agreed.

True to his promise, Fuller made his appearance at the apartment building on the next afternoon with a modernly appointed motor, and a uniformed chauffeur. He tucked Mary into the rear seat, and ordered the driver to make a leisurely circuit out through the Park and along the River. It was nearly dusk when they returned after tea at a rather "smart" road house—and it was plain that Fuller was rapidly becoming infatuated—that Mary's innocence and apparent indifference to their unconventional relationship were so different from the feminine eyes to which the man was accustomed from his acquaintances of the cafes and cabarets that he was losing his native caution and shrewdness. Mary evaded his invitation for the next day, but hesitatingly promised to let him call on the following afternoon. Fuller took his departure, on the whole very well contented.

Mona had decided to continue her role of "professional introducer" at the Frivolity, at least for the present. To begin with, there was nothing which she could do to aid Mary's cause, and in the second place, their funds were beginning to get alarmingly low. It was this second factor which induced her to approach the manager of the cafe, and ask for an advance. The man agreed promptly, for the girl's services had proven more valuable than he had expected.

"If you don't mind, I will give you a check," he said. "I'll make it out on the Ajax National, and witness your endorsement so that you will have no trouble in cashing it."

"Thank's," said Mona. The words Ajax National meant nothing to her—then it was not until the next morning when she presented the check at the paying teller's window that she appreciated the unexpected good fortune that had been given her with the conventional pink slip of paper. The paying teller turned the check over several times, made a movement as though to count out the bills in payment for the sum designated, and then, apparently seeing some real or fancied defect in the endorsement, he got down from his stool, and called an assistant. Mona saw the two whizpeet together for a moment, and they caught the word "falter" as Mr. Fuller, Ed, tried to avoid any trouble.

Mona flushed. Fuller! Could it be that Fate had sent her to the bank of Amos Fuller—the man whom they had marked for poetic retribution? Her question was answered when a moment later the teller turned to her at the door of a private office, and asked her if she would be good enough to accompany him to the girl's room to wait until he had had time to think what was wrong with the check, or what was wanted of her, but this was to her an opportunity to see if she were, indeed, the institution presided over by Amos Fuller, who chose to hide the hideous life under the name of "Winters"—her speculations were cut short by the sight of the stocky figure of Amos Fuller, himself, who turned from a mahogany desk at their entrance.

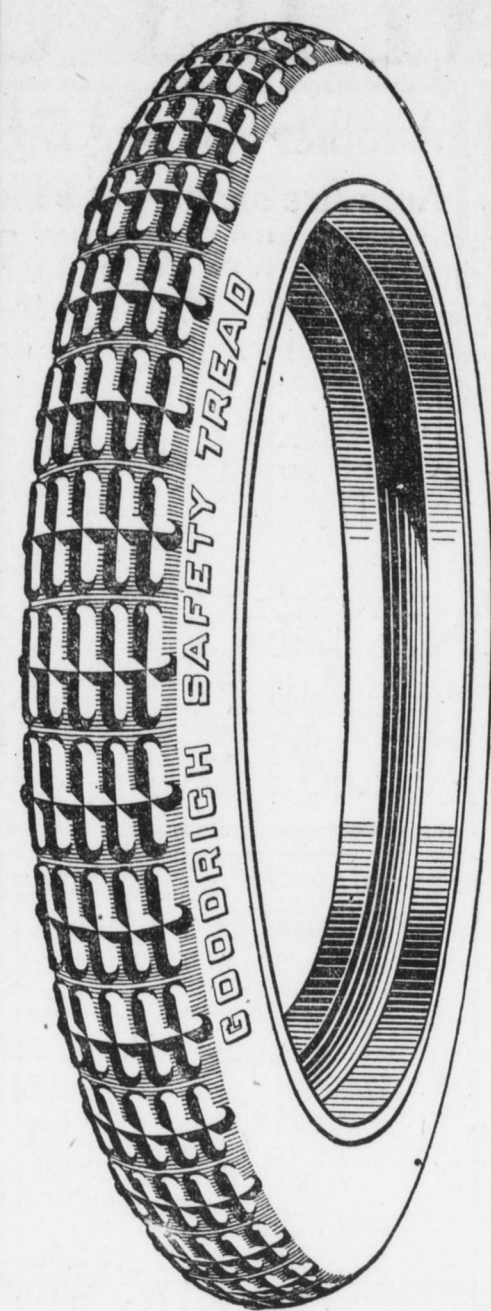

For a moment he sat staring at her without recognition. And then a frown gathered swiftly on his face as he saw the girl smile, and he snapped a hasty order to the paying teller to wait outside. It was not until the door had closed behind the other that he turned himself into a chair, and watched holding his handkerchief to his mouth. "It is a pleasant day, is it not—Mr. Winters?"

Fuller scowled.

"There isn't any need to laugh!" he snapped. "Can't a man have any fun at these days?"

"Of course, he can, you old dear!" returned Mona, giving him a playful nudge under the chin which made Fuller scowl again. What if one of his clerks should come in suddenly? Or what if—

"Reason-Why" Tires

GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires are light in weight, and close grained. This proves them relatively free from the usual inert substances or "fillers," that give excess Weight, stiffness, and grind, to Tire treads.

More than 200 different Makes and Brands of Motor-Car, and Truck, Tires were manufactured and sold in U. S. A. last year, 1915.

These totalled about 12,000,000 Tires. Of that 12,000,000 total Tires, the B. F. Goodrich Co. made and sold one-fourth.

Yet,—Tires are only one of the 267 different lines of Rubber Goods made by the Goodrich Rubber Factory, which is the largest in the World, with a 47-year Experience.

This indicates the "Reason-Why" Goodrich Best-in-the-Market Fabric Tires can be, and are, sold to Consumers (via Dealers) at the lowest prices in America, per delivered Mile of Performance. Compare figures herewith and see!

DRIVE AUSTRIANS INTO DEATH TRAP

Russians Rout Enemies and Capture Radatz, Close to Rumanian Frontier

Petrograd, June 23. — The capture of Radatz, a city of 13,000 inhabitants, situated thirty miles south of Czernowitz and ten miles from the Rumanian frontier, which announced last night officially by the Russian War office, shows how actively General Letchitzky, having crossed the Sereth, is pursuing the broken Austrian forces. Nothing but a miracle it is now believed can avert the destruction of General Pfanner's army, as General

Letchitzky now holds a stretch of twenty miles on the Sereth river. The last two days have brought no essential change in the situation of General Brussloff's front. But in the center and along the northern flank the Russian drive has been halted by the fierce counter-offensive of the Teutonic allies.

From Western Front
The defense of the Kovel-Lutsk region has been taken over entirely by German reinforcements newly arrived from the French front and which are making a determined attempt to regain the ground lost during the first ten days of the Russian advance. One group of German forces is concentrated at Kovel, where it attempted to advance toward Kolki, but after a sharp conflict in the neighborhood of the Stokhod river was forced to retire by the Russians.

The second group of German forces defending Vladimir-Volynsk, has started an advance along the main road leading from Vladimir-Volynsk to Lutsk, while a third group, with headquarters at Sokal, is likewise joining in the movement to press back the extended northern flank of General Brussloff's army.

On the other points of the front further Russian operations are being delayed by the necessity for consolidating positions already won.
