WHAT OFFICERS' INSIGNIA MEANS

Puzzled as to Whether He's Corporal or Colonel? This Might Help

Unless one knows the meaning of the various colors, cords and other insignias of rank, the devices on sleeves and collar might be a bit confusing. So, in order that you don't unintentionally address a sergeant as colonel or a major as corporal, the badges of officers that will be most commonly seen during these days of the mobilization at Mt. Gretna are given below. The same insignias apply in the regular service.

All the troops will be garbed in olive drab and the sleeve insignias of noncommissioned officers are worked in buff; the officers' collar insignias are in gun metal, while the shoulder devices are in silver.

The Officers' Insignia

The hat cords may be a guide as to what branches of service the wearer belongs. The infantry wore a blue cord about their campaign hats; the cavalry orange yellow, the artillery red; the engineers dark red, and the hospital or medical corps, green. Officers all wear a twisted black and gold cord, with knotted tassels, about their hats. Incidentally, the officers wear only their automatics and no sabers. A single band of brown braid is worn on the sleeve of all the officers up to captain's rank.

Corporal insignias are as follows: Crossed rifles, infantry; crossed sabers, cavalry; crossed cannon, artillery; crossed canon with shell in center, coast artillery; adjutant general's department, flag shield; general staff, star and coat-of-arms; aid-de-camp, shield surmounted by eagle; quartermaster general's department, wheel, crossed key and saber, surmounted by spread eagle.

Officers' shoulder insignias are: No shoulder bars, single arm band and officers' hat cord, second lieutenant; single silver bar, first lieutenant; two silver bars, captain; gold oak leaf, major; silver oak leaf, lieutenant colonel; silver eagle, colonel; single silver star, brigadier general; two silver stars, major general.

Now for the sleeve markings of the noncommissioned officers. Company, troop or battery insignias: chevrons, two stripes, corporal; three stripes, sergeant; three stripes with diamond in crutch, first or "top" sergeant; single bar across the chevrons, quartermaster.

In the cavalry there are additional insignias as follows: A leather-cutter, "saddler" horsehoe, "blacksmith" wheel, "wagoner," sergeant's chevrons with curved bar connecting crutch and trumpet in center, chief trumpeter; sergeant's chevrons with crutch in center, principal musician; trumpet only, bugler.

With the exception of the officers that pertain to the handling of the horses the infantry special insignias are practically the same. The color sergeant's device for instance is alike in each branch. This is a sergeant's chevrons with a star in the crutch.

The sergeant's chevrons are a little more puzzling to the layman. The quartermaster sergeant's chevrons for battalion and regiment are precisely the same as in the company organization except that there are two bars connecting the crutches of the chevrons for the battalion officer and three for the regimental. The sergeant's chevrons with the crutches spanned by inverted double stripes; the regimental sergeant's chevrons with the crutch and three straight bars below.

IN MEXICO 70 YEARS AGO

All the sterling poems produced by the contest "The Towers of Monterey" easily bears off the palm. And what will greatly add to its interest, in the mind of all Telegraph readers, is the fact that its author was that polished scholar and courtly gentleman, Charles Penno Hoffman, who was, for many years, an inmate of the State Lunatic Asylum in the suburbs of Harrisburg. Yet not a single soldier quailed, when he was known to every soldier of literature in our land, and is well worth a reproduction here as a spirited presentation of how Monterey was fought and won.

THE TOWERS OF MONTEREY

By Charles Penno Hoffman

We were not many—we who stood Before the iron sleet that day— Yet many a gallant spirit would Give half his years, if he but could 'Have' been with us at Monterey.

Now here, now there, the shot it hailed In deadly drifts of fiery spray, Yet not a single soldier quailed, When wounded comrades 'round them wailed, Their dying shout at Monterey.

And on, still on our column kept Through walls of flame its withering way; Where fell the dead, the living slept, Still charging on the guns that swept The slippery streets of Monterey.

The foe himself recoiled aghast When, striking where the strongest lay, We swooped his flanking batteries past And braving full his murderous blast, Stormed home the towers of Monterey.

Our banners on those turrets wave; And there our evening bugles play, Where orange-boughs above their grave, Keep green the memory of the brave, Who fought and fell at Monterey.

We were not many—we who pressed Beside the brave who fell that day; Yet who of us has not confessed He'd rather share their warrior rest, Than not have been at Monterey? Buena Vista, the Most Remarkable Battle of American History.

About the time that General Taylor captured Monterey, one of the annual or semiannual revolutions in Mexico deposed the arrogant Paredes from his brief lease of power. The renowned Santa Anna who had been a storm center of Mexican plots and intrigues for twenty years, was recalled from exile and given dictatorial power. He promised the Mexican people that he would soon rid their land of the "accursed Yankess" (the term "Gringos" for the Americans had not then been invented in Mexico. Its origin will be told a little later.)

Santa Anna promptly took the field, by forced loans on the clergy, the monopolies, the bankers, and in fact anyone who was suspected of having means, he raised large sums of money. Soon he had an army of more than 20,000 men and advanced rapidly to the fortified position of San Luis Potosi with the avowed intention of annihilating Taylor and his little army.

Taylor was not averse to accepting the gauge of battle proffered him and

TO INSPECT MOTORBOATS

Inspection of the navigable portions of the Susquehanna are to be included in the proposed inspection of equipment for motorboats which is to be made during July, August and September under the direction of Charles R. Kurtz, Surveyor of Customs, of Philadelphia. The Philadelphia district includes all the navigable waters along the New Jersey coast from Bay Head south to Cape May, Delaware bay and river, the Schuylkill and the Susquehanna rivers.

The inspection has been ordered by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and is intended to prevent motorboat accidents as much as possible. Fines for violation of regulations will be imposed.

Postal Receipts For Fiscal Year Total $305,000,000

Washington, June 26. — Postal receipts for the last two quarters broke all records, aggregating $84,564,447 for the quarter ending December 31, 1915, and $29,699,422 for the quarter ending March 31, 1916. Prospects are that the total postal receipts for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, will amount at least to $305,000,000 and that for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1916, by more than $20,000,000.

The largest check ever drawn by a Postmaster General was that of June 16, in favor of the Treasurer of the United States, representing the amount, $54,253,962, disbursed by postmasters during the March quarter for running expenses. It constitutes both a deposit in and a withdrawal from the Treasury. The remaining receipts for the March quarter, $25,445,660, are available for other postal purposes.

ELECTROCUTE MURDERERS

By Associated Press
Bellefonte, Pa., June 26.—Gaspar Marturano and Thomas Chickarella, two Italians of Barnesboro, Cambria county, who murdered Vito Cavallo for his pay envelope two years ago, were electrocuted in the Western Penitentiary early to-day. A hard fight had been made to have the sentence of death commuted to life imprisonment.
