Miss Pendergast Entertains For Miss Esther Parthemore, Bride of C. H. Bair

The last of a series of prenuptial entertainments was given Miss Esther Parthemore, of 1923 Derry street, whose marriage to Charles H. Bair, of Washington, D. C., will be solemnized Wednesday evening, when Miss Gertrude Pendergast held a bridal shower at her home, 918 North Sixth street.

A large "hope chest," wrapped in white crepe paper and tied with white satin ribbons, was borne into the room by Master John Gilbert Pendergast, a nephew of the hostess. Upon opening the "chest" Miss Parthemore's eyes rested upon a profusion of pretty and useful gifts for her new home.

The evening was spent with music and the recounting of teaching experiences of the young school-teacher, Miss Parthemore, who has taught at the Children's Industrial Home the past year.

The dining room was decorated entirely in bridal white, in keeping with the coming event. The centerpiece was a large white basket filled with lilies, honeysuckle, white sweetwilliam, white carnations and bride roses. White satin ribbons were taken from the chandelier to all parts of the room, making it a veritable fairyland.

Covers were laid for twelve guests, including Miss Esther Parthemore, Miss Kathryn Smith, Miss Ida Sweeney, Miss Frances Gelwicks, Miss Ruth Parthemore, Miss Susan Kurzenkabe, Miss Anne Zudrell, Miss Elsie Landis, Miss Edna Mutzabugh, Miss Ann Harris, Miss Sera Bannan and Miss Gertrude Pendergast.

A Sale of Brass Beds That Affords Real Economy

Here are the reasons for this unusual sale:

These stocks were bought many months before the jump in prices and were supposed to have been shipped to us in time for the opening of our New Store. Due to traffic congestion on the railroads the shipment was delayed several weeks. By the time the belated consignment reached us it was too late to serve our purpose. To make a long story short the manufacturers made us a big price concession to keep them. These price advantages we gladly turn over to you.

Every Brass Bed is of the very highest grade and is perfect in every respect and every one represents an extraordinary bargain as compared with present prices. Study this list of savings—then come in and see the Beds—you'll appreciate the values better.
