LONG THREATENED DRIVE IS STARTED

This strategy was agreed upon at the all-German convention in Paris, and was subsequently developed in greater detail by General Joffre in his recent conference with Sir William Robertson, British chief of staff. To aid in carrying it out, Russian plans are believed to have been the basis of the Lord Kitchener when he lost his life in the sinking of the Hampshire while on his way to Petrograd.

The Germans have been slow in withdrawing men from the French front, because they knew of the formidable massing of troops that has been going on behind the Anglo-French lines. In fact, military observers declare that the Verdun assault has been prolonged in order to forestall any allied offensive. Against the British portion of the front alone it is estimated that the Germans have maintained in reserve no less than 700,000 men.

The conservatives demanded the resumption of unrestrained submarine operations. In reply, the Chancellor said: "We have only twenty high sea submarines, divided into squadrons of five. One of these squadrons is always in dock for repairs. Our other submarines are necessary for coast defense."

"Not a day passes but that I am visited by Austro-Hungarian and Turkish deputies who threaten a separate peace unless we cease the submarine war. They fear that after the war the allies and the United States will entirely paralyze their overseas trade."

Two Granges Endorse William Penn Highway

That the agriculturists of Pennsylvania are quite as enthusiastic as their city brothers in the advocacy of better highways is evident from the fact that two county Pomona Granges have endorsed the William Penn Highway proposition, whereby the old Pittsburgh-Philadelphia turnpike is to be permanentized.

The Cambria County Pomona Grange and the Huntingdon County Pomona Grange, which represents a total of about 50 subordinate grange bodies, have given the William Penn road their approval. That of the Huntingdon body was without reserve, but the Cambria County grange asked that the main road routing be changed so as to bring the highway closer to the really agricultural section of that county. The Cambria county committee which drafted the good roads resolution was composed of James A. Farabaugh, Ebensburg, R. D.; A. B. Kirsch, Nicktown; John C. Sheridan, South Fork; Thomas Hughes, Cresora, R. D.; and Henry M. Gooderham, Patton.
