The Next Step in Democracy, by R. W. Sellars, Ph. D. (MacMillan Company, N. Y., $1.50.)

A discussion of the ever-present theory of government that we call socialism is scarcely profitable without a working knowledge of what constitutes socialism and what its aims and hopes are. This very necessary information, essential to a fair-minded criticism, is here given in a broad, comprehensive way by the assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan. Many will absolutely disagree with the opinions advanced and the deductions reached, but the treatment given is extremely interesting in his development of the subject.

The author describes socialism as "a democratic movement whose purpose is the securing of an economic organization of society which will give the maximum possible at any one time of justice and liberty." He is here describing the ideal condition, but unfortunately he minimizes the powerful force of human nature pulling the other way. He develops the idea of socialism from the Utopians, who believed in the natural goodness of all humans and in an artificial environment; through the Marxian school, which was more practical and brought the socialists' belief into direct communication with an adaptation to the working classes connected with large industries; and finally to the present stage, when agitators and educators are both necessary to the spread of the socialistic propaganda.

The Red Debt, Echoes from Kentucky, by Everett MacDonald. (G. W. Dillingham Co., $1.25.)

This is an absorbing story of the McGills vs. the Lutts, one of the famous old Kentucky feuds. Moonshiners and revenue men, law-haters and ruthless slayers keep the action at a high pitch of excitement through the rough giants of the hills, with their own honest but misled conviction of right and wrong, are an interesting lot.

The plot deals with the history of the young Lutts who are determined to avenge their father's death at the hands of the revenue man, Little Belle-Ann Benson, the adopted daughter of "Fighting" Lutts, registers a vow that the man who shall kiss her lips must first kill the "revenuer." She loves Lem Lutts and he reciprocates. However, she goes away to school and receives a new vision of her duty, which after a powerful struggle is also revealed to Lem. The ending is a happy one, but the suspense entirely satisfactory.

The Gate of Asia, by William Warfield. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, $2.50.)

The author takes his readers on a geographical journey from the Persian Gulf to the Black Sea, recounting in an interesting fashion his own trip through the region including Mesopotamia, Kurdistan, Armenia, and the Persian province of Azerbaijan, that connecting link between the characteristically European nationalities and the equally characteristic Asiatic races. All invading armies, all trade routes from the west that have gone east or vice versa, have passed through this country and the author's route crossed that of the great conquerors, Nadir Shah, Xenophon, Alexander the Great, the Emperor Julian, and other conquerors.

It is a valuable work for those who are concerned with a study of the particular region, an adequate and ample view of the commercial, religious, civil and martial life and customs of these people who live in the pathway that connects two great continents.

The tragic death of Lord Kitchener has revived interest in the many stories...

Everyone experiences a thrill of pleasure at seeing him or herself on the moving picture screen. At the Majestic perhaps you may be fortunate enough to see yourself on the last half of this week. If you stood in line with the thousands of others to witness the wonderful parade of the great City of Paris, should you fail to see yourself, you can, at least, pick out some of your friends here and there in the huge gathering. The pictures show the boys preparing for war, executing maneuvers, being mustered into the army, bidding farewell to relatives and friends. The regular five acts of vaudeville, headed by the dramatic sketch entitled "The Meadow Brook Lane," are being given along with these pictures.

Pauline Frederick scored another success as Madge, the gypsy heroine, in "The Moment Before" at the Regent. The play will be shown for the last time to-day at the Regent.

Miss Frederick is seen first as the elderly Duchess Malden, who, in a moment before her death, has her story revealed to her. As the gypsy, Madge, she is seen at her best, and acting takes on additional emotional power with the various sensational incidents in her career as she becomes the wife of Lord Malden.

To-morrow, for the benefit of those unable to see the first episode of "Gloria's Romance," featuring Billie Burke, last week, the management has made arrangements to show the first and second episodes together to-day.

The last two days of the week will feature "The Bugle Call," featuring the celebrated actor, "Dustin Farnum."

The little town of Rio Vista, Cal., was rudely shocked the other day when William Farnum his bride, Mary Ruby, at Colonial led their wedding procession into the principal saloon of the town. It developed that the incident was to serve as one of the scenes in the William Fox production, "A Man of Sorrow," starring William Farnum, which is appearing at the Colonial for the last time to-day, but even in an equal outrage State this unusual scene, while in the making, could not escape attention.

Friday and Saturday Thos. H. Ince will present a five-reel story of war and romance, entitled "The Bugle Call," which features William Collier, Jr. On the same bill will be another of those roaring funny two-reel Keystone comedies called "Hearts and Sparks," which features Hank Mann and a typical Keystone cast.

To-day's attraction at the Victoria will undoubtedly be of great interest to every person in the city at Victoria Today view of the fact that the mobilization of the National Guard of Pennsylvania will be shown. Six prizes have been offered by merchants of the town for the best decorated boats as follows: First prize, umbrella, offered by F. D. Blessing & Sons; second, flash light, S. B. Zerfoss; third, box of shells, by Nye & Conrad; fourth, bottle of lilac toilet water, Dr. J. Irwin Ruff; fifth, pair of Suspenders, E. Z. Eiter; sixth, box of toilet soap, Morris M. Engle. The prizes are on display in the show windows of the various merchants donating them.
