WOMAN WITH BABY JUMPS FROM TRAIN

Believed She Made Leap From Pennsylvania Passenger Car While Asleep

Special to the Telegraph
Lewistown, Pa., June 30.—Occupants of the John Shaver home, near Newton Hamilton, were aroused at an early hour yesterday morning when they heard the cry of an infant from the embankment of the railroad near by. With lights they found a woman in a helpless condition lying between the track with a baby lying near by. The woman was Mrs. Hannah Gawawala, of Marion, Ind., who told her rescuers that the baby had fallen from the window and she had jumped from the train to get it. It is thought that while she was asleep she dreamed that the baby had fallen from the window and that she jumped from the train with the babe in her arms, thus forming a protection for it. Mrs. Gawawala, who is about 42 years old, suffered cuts on the arms, face and head and was badly bruised. The mother and babe were taken to the hospital. The woman had a $20 bill in her pocketbook and a ticket from New York to Pittsburgh. The ticket bore the punch mark of Conductor Snyder, of Harrisburg.
