THE END OF A PARTY

We regret the end of the Progressive party, although we have often stated that it had hardly any real existence apart from Roosevelt. It might have had a real place and a real usefulness.

But we like his ideas on tariff and on business control much better than Mr. Wilson's antiquated ideas of cut-throat competition. And since we cannot have Roosevelt we should have liked to see a Progressive party endorsing Hughes and keeping to the forefront the practical measures of reform which the Republican party never mentions except on platforms.

destroy and bury remains the most vital figure in our politics, able to lead the people none the less effectually because the machine will have none of him.—Editorial by H. J. Whigham in the July Metropolitan.

FISH LATCHED IN ARTESIAN BASIN One of the most unique and convenient fish hatcheries of the government is located near Laramie, Wyoming, where sources of good water are few and far between, the region being semi-desert. This hatchery is an artificial pond fed by a never-failing artesian well which flows of course night and day.—July Popular Science Monthly.

WIN CLASS HONORS Special to the Telegraph Waynesboro, Pa., June 30.—Ray B. Hess, Mont Alto, carried off the honors of his class at the Shippensburg Normal School this year. George T. Fitz, of Waynesboro, won third honors.

Richard W. Austin of Tennessee halted the hope of liberty in the Philippines with a speech. Speaking with emotion of an American whose money is invested in a boot and shoe store in Manila, he then shouted: "And what will you do with Judge Ingersoll from my State, who has his last dollar invested in a Philippine mining proposition? What will you do with the southern man from Georgia who has his every cent invested in a lumber enterprise? What will become of the other Americans hailing from every State in the Union? Will you create another Mexico for them? Oh, no, my countrymen!"

Judge's investment turns out.— Art Young in the July Metropolitan. PAROLED, NOT FREE VERSE Our happy friend, Don Marquis, tells us in the Evening Sun something of paroled verse, which he describes as verse that has been tried and found guilty; it has served its time and is out on good behavior. Then he gives us this example of paroled verse: Sweet Penelope Died of syncope When her avuncular relative Who lives in the antipodes Sent her an antelope. Let us hope the parole will never be withdrawn. Let it amble on to make the world a little merrier.—Pulitzer's Review.
