Globe's Thousand Suit Campaign Is Now On

Yesterday The Globe inaugurated another of their semiannual one thousand suit campaigns which have created considerable interest in the past, this being the third event of its kind. The one thousand suits campaign is a merchandising event conceived by Ben Strouse, proprietor of The Globe, and has attracted the attention of many live merchants throughout the United States.

States,
The features of the sale are unusual, in that in addition to price reductions to be enjoyed on the merchandise an additional refund of 5 per cent, of the purchase price is made to each customer if one thousand men's and hower suits are sold before the

each customer if one thousand men's and boys' suits are sold before the closing date, which in the present instance is August 26.

These one thousand suit campaigns have met with increasing favor from time to time and efforts have been put forth on the part of the management to make the present eccasion the ment to make the present occasion the most successful in the history of The Globe. successful in the history of The Glob. Extra salespeople have been added to the regular sales force to insure prompt and efficient service at all times during the campaign.
