Capitol Extension Commission
Still Has Considerable
Work Before It

The taking over a few days ago of the last of the buildings in the area marked for condemnation by the Capitol Park Extension commission marked the completion of four years of steady, constructive work that will not be finally finished until the last of the buildings is demolished by June 1, 1917, as required by the act of 1911.

A member of the board stated this morning that the majority of the buildings standing will be demolished after January 1, 1917, and the remainder between April 1 and June 1, with the exception of those buildings in which are housed certain departments of the State for which there was not room in the Capitol building.

The demolition of the properties is now in the hands of the Department of Public Grounds and Buildings, which will take no action until next Fall, at which time an adviser will be appointed and consideration given to the landscape treatment.

The following buildings may stand for an indefinite period or until the Legislature takes action on the housing of the several departments there-in located; the Russ building, otherwise known as the Keeley Institute, where the State Livestock Sanitary Board has its headquarters; the two Wall properties, where a branch of the Public Service Commission is housed; the old Day school building for colored children on Walnut street, now occupied as a laboratory for the Department of Agriculture; the McCormick warehouses now used as storage places for the State Arsenal; the property of the Gordon manufacturing company on Walnut street, occupied by the department for the Distribution of Public Documents; and the A. M. E. Church on State street, heretofore used as an armory for the Governor's troop. All these buildings will probably be left standing until provision is made elsewhere for the departments named.

Board's Work Ends on June 1, 1917
The activities of the Capitol Park Extension Board will now be turned to a defense in the courts against ten appeals from its awards, involving 20 properties.

It is regarded as a tribute to the commission's fairness that the number of appeals is so few in a total of 537 cases. Fourteen proceedings including 17 properties were taken in condemnation, but settlements were made by the board and proceedings were discontinued by reason of amicable agreements being reached with the owners.

This Is the Birthday Anniversary of—

SENATOR E. E. BEIDLEMAN

President pro tem of the State senate, who will be re-elected with little opposition next Fall. Senator Beidleman was surprised by a little party of his friends to-day, who bundled him into an automobile and whisked him away to The Elm, a summer place owned by Freeman C. Gerberich, chief of the State Bureau of Railways, along the Susquehanna above Dauphin.

There an old-time camp dinner was spread in his honor and the afternoon was spent in outdoor amusements.

Middleburg Editor Buys Rival County Seat Paper

Middleburg, Pa., July 8.—Yesterday an important transaction took place, involving changes in three weekly newspapers of Pennsylvania. The Snyder County News, of this place, was sold by Barton & Gougler to George W. Wagenseil, publisher of the Middleburg Post, one of the best known weeklies in Pennsylvania. The News will be merged with the Post. Mr. Barton then purchased the Duncannon Record of William E. Bender.
