sound of cheering.

"Oh, dear this IS an exciting life!"
Way back in a dark corner of the storehouse, a peevish faminine voice complained. "That IS some one-step—and we can't even move a foot. One-step: Mercy, we couldn't even 'hesitate', providing folks still did that."
"It's pretty popular with City Council." interjected a second voice. "That's about all it's been doing so far as we're concerned. But then that's about the city commissioners speed—" wanted to use some funds from Commissioner Bowman's department to fill along the River Front. Mr. Lynch thinks the money should be used to think the money should be used to think the money should be used to the second sneaker.

One of Harrisburg's oldest and best known business institutions is the Gross Drug Store at 119 Market street. For years this store has enjoyed an enviable reputation with the local public and has built up a patronage not only among Harrisburgers, but the tesidents of districts outside of Harrisburg for miles around.

One of the departments to which special attention is given is the prescription department, in which the utmost care is exercised in the filling of prescriptions. Then, too, there are complete lines of drugs and drug accessories and an unusually well selected line of toilet goods, among which are numbered several articles of merit compounded by the Gross Drug Store.—Advertisement.

CUSTOM TAILORING FOR MEN

The name of Lack has long been identified with men's custom tailoring in Harrisburg. Fred S. Lack, 26, 28 and 30 North Dewberry street, has year by year been building up a staunch patronage for Lack custom tailored clothing for men.

Stocks at all times are replete with the very newest weaves and patterns in fabrics for men's suits, overcoats and trousers, embracing not only business dress, but evening dress as well.

The business has grown from a modest beginning to a point where it ranks well up among the prominent business places of the city, the credit for which is given by its owner to a rigid policy of honest quality, sensible prices and absolute satisfaction of the customer.—Advertisement.

a sardonically grinning face, growled a warning. "Peace to the three of you, my daughters. Sleep for another few years. Thou hast been talking like the spouting of a fountain." "Oh, dear," murmured the trio despairingly, "Pan-ed again!"
