

ARMS FROM U. S. KILL AMERICANS

Mexicans Getting Guns and Ammunitions, Senator Borah Says, Despite Embargo

Washington, July 14. — American bullets are used against American soldiers seeking to present order in Mexico by the Carranzistas and Villistas with the "connivance and consent" of the Wilson administration.

Despite the announcement of the State Department that an embargo of arms has been placed on the shipment of arms into Mexico since the Columbus raid and the attack on American soldiers at Carrizal, it is said that all the ammunitions and arms Mexico can buy being sent into the stricken republic by American manufacturers.

The killing of American citizens and soldiers is attributed by Senator Borah directly to the policy of this administration in not placing an absolute embargo on the supplies of war.

Senator Borah has collected definite information as to the situation. He has evidence from the men who have suffered from the use of American bullets and in the President's issue squarely home to the American public and the Administration in a speech in the Senate very soon.

"Do you think there should be an embargo?" the Senator was asked. "I certainly do, and nearly every American who has studied the Mexican problem thinks the same," he replied.

"In March, 1912, Congress gave full power to the President to lay an embargo on arms and munitions of war going into Mexico. President Taft laid the embargo. President Wilson in his address to Congress August 27, 1913, indorsed this policy as the best practice and custom of nations and said he would not do otherwise.

"On March 19, 1914, Villa attacked Columbus, N. M., and within the next week Pershing's expedition entered Mexico in pursuit of Villa, whom we were to have dead or alive.

"On April 1 thereafter another Ward Line steamer from New York unloaded at Vera Cruz 1,350,000 rounds of soft-nosed cartridges and other munitions together with other munitions of war.

"On May 13 thereafter another shipment of war munitions was unloaded at Vera Cruz for Carranza. Between that time and the first of June another shipment of arms was unloaded at Vera Cruz for Carranza. During all of this time, and even later, large shipments of munitions of war have, by permission of American authorities, gone into Mexico over the border.

"I am reluctant to be forced to the conclusion that the de facto government, in spite of the crimes committed and the slaughter of our own men and his followers, did not and does not intend or desire that these outlaws should be captured, destroyed or dispersed by American troops or at the request of this Government by the Mexican troops."

"But even if Carranza could be relied upon not to use the arms against us—and every sensible man knows he cannot—still the armed banditti of Carranza of to-day may be the followers of Villa to-morrow. The press dispatches of this morning state that 2,000 Carranza soldiers have revolted and joined Villa. They are all armed with American arms and supplied with American munitions of war by the connivance and consent of this government.

"Let us suppose, further, that these arms would not be used against our own soldiers and against our own citizens. Still we know that for two years the bandit soldiers have robbed and looted from the starving Mexicans every usable form of property for the purpose of exchanging it for munitions of war, which are being supplied to them by the consent of our government.

"We have known for two years that all the arms and ammunition with which the Mexicans are murdering one another and with which they have murdered and assassinated our own people have been furnished by American manufacturers and establishments with the consent of our government."

"There is a plan now, it is said, to furnish money to Mexican bandits, particularly Carranza, if he lasts long enough to receive it. Does our government itself sees to the application of this money, does any one assume that it will serve the Mexican people, that it will in any way help the poor and famished masses of Mexico? Eighty-five cents of every dollar which we furnish to Carranza will be returned here to buy arms and ammunition. We talk humanity and we practice inhumanity. We assert we are lovers of peace and we connive at and sustain inhuman and barbarous war by exchanging arms for the property looted from a starving people.

"It has been asserted I understand that there has been a check put upon the supply of arms to Mexico. I do not assume that this assertion is not made in good faith but I do say that it is a very light check indeed; arms and ammunition of every kind are still going into Mexico. I have been furnished the facts in a way I cannot doubt. This much we know: that every bullet that plows its way through the vitals of an American citizen on the border of an American soldier will have been furnished to the assassins by the connivance and consent of our government. "Every guardsman who falls a victim to Mexican treachery, and it is just as likely to be at the hands of the Carranzistas as the Villistas will carry back to his friends and family the unmistakable evidence of American enterprise by the consent of our government. In view of conditions which prevail in Mexico, and have ever since Huerta was driven out, there can be no possible justification for furnishing munitions of war to those people. It is inhuman and barbarous to the last degree. It convicts us of insincerity and hypocrisy." A MISUNDERSTANDING EASILY CONDONED "Not long ago," said a certain pastor, "I preached in a church in Virginia, and in the congregation was an aged colored 'mammy,' picturesque in bandana and pinafore. In my discourse I remarked that the commentators did not agree with me. Presently this 'mammy' arose and quietly slipped out of church. After the service I found her standing outside the door with a bag in her hand, and this she presented to me, saying, 'I heard yo' say de common 'taters don' agree wid yo', an' I hurried home to git yo' some sweet Virginny yams.'" —The Christian Herald. BANK CALL FOR $40,000,000 Washington, D. C., July 14.—Withdrawal of $40,000,000 of the Treasury's deposits in the Federal Reserve banks was ordered to-day by Secretary McAdoo. Treasury officials said the action was in the usual course of business, the enormous total of the withdrawal being due to the fact that heavy deposits made by the internal revenue collectors, in the closing days of the fiscal year, had brought the Treasury's balance in the banks to well above $100,000,000. Part of the $40,000,000 will be taken from each of the 12 banks. BURLESON'S CANOE UPSET Washington, July 14.—It leaked out yesterday that Postmaster General Burleson and a party of officials from his department capsize in the Potomac rapids last Sunday while fishing from a canoe.
