APOSTLE PAUL

STRONG ORATOR

Address on Mars Hill One of Classical Examples in All Standard Books

By William T. Ellis

One of the classical examples of oratory quoted in all standard books is the address of the Apostle Paul on Mars Hill. Here is the address itself:

"Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, the spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. Therefore disputing with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him. Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him. And some said, What will this babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them of Jesus, and of the resurrection. And they took him, and brought him unto Aeropagus, saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, you must pay proper attention to diet and living conditions, and get plenty of rest and fresh air and good food. Many a life claimed by this affection might have been saved by timely attention to these matters. In many cases, however, a rundown system needs assistance. is? For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean. (For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

"Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars Hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are very religious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you. God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though He needed anything, seeing He hath given unto us life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him, though He be not far from every one of us: For in Him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, for we are also His offspring. Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the God-head is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device. And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commanded all men every where to repent: Because He hath appointed a day, in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead.

"And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked; and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. So Paul departed from them: Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them."

"I like to see Christianity travel through to his conclusion, and face the truth that we must create a new world over for human life? President Thwing said the other day that the greatest failure of our civilization is the present lack of international brotherhood. A reconstruction period is coming to the world. Only the ideals of Christianity can make it adequate. The thinking of the world must be lifted up to the level of Mars Hill. Except there be a new sense of Christian obligation to brother every other man, we shall not escape from our present slough of misery and hatred.

As yet the churches have no clear program or leadership on this point. The pulpit is silent. Great ecclesiastical gatherings seem to have been blind to it, engrossing themselves wholly with minor administrative matters. Still the truth grows more apparent every day, that the Church fronts her supreme task; that of creating a new world order that shall be war-proof and life-proof. She must put into humanity the mind that was in Christ Jesus." Unless she can make men realize that "All ye are brethren there is no hope in sight for our civilization. The goal, which five years ago seemed to be the province of missions, has to-day become the most acute problem of statesmanship. The Lord's own law of love will have to prevail if all things are not to fail. The simple way to put this into operation is for each of us to begin to be more loving toward the next person whose life touches ours—and especially if he be one with whom we find ourselves uncongenial.

The Aim Of It All

After his magnificent presentation of universal brotherhood, Paul in his oration, proceeds to state its object: "That they should seek the Lord." The goal of all the progress of man is just—God. "Thou hast made us for Thyself, O Lord, and our hearts cannot be at rest until they rest in Thee," said old St. Augustine. The consummation of all the processes of existence is the finding of God who made us, and who awaits the return of our spirits to Himself. Spiritual concerns are thus seen not only to be the most important, but also the most practical. Upon them wait the issues of all life.

Only as they meet at the foot of the Cross of Christ, will nations ever come together. There is not statesmanship enough in London and Berlin and Paris and Petrograd to reconcile the European nations now at war. Only a new and overwhelming sense of God can accomplish this essential goal. As men draw to God in humble discipleship and self-distrust, will they find themselves closest to one another. The way home for the world is newly seen to be the way of the Cross. It is while the chastened spirits of the proud nations are saying "Our Father" that they learn to proceed to say "Our brother."

The Results of a Good Speech

Some preachers are afraid of picturing this address of Paul on Mars Hill as a failure. They say it was too learned and too philosophical, and they portray the Apostle as leaving the Aeropagus with eyes cast down and heart burdened in the consciousness that his fine speech was a failure, and that it had made no converts. All of which is reading a theory into the text. The converts of this address were important enough to have their names mentioned. When Paul went from Mars Hill and from Athens, he left behind him a mighty leaven in the lump of the city's life.

True, some of the merely speculative philosophers balked at his teachings of repentance and of the resur- rection. Everybody who thinks that religion is merely a matter for discussion finds fault with Christianity on this ground. Like every good sermon, Paul's oration on Mars Hill ended with the presentation of a definite duty and of the "Glorious Hope." The dearest hope of the race that life shall continue beyond the grave is made real and near by Christ, who Himself tasted death that man might taste life. Christianity is not merely a philosophical conception. It all heads up in Christ and Him crucified, the one Saviour and the Everlasting Power of those who accept Him.

Paul's message had much in common with the teachings of the philosophers of the Aeropagus, but in this one point it went beyond them all, in that it offered that of which they were so barren, life, new and more abundant.

CHINA, LIGHTNING-CHANGE ARTIST

Less than one hundred dollars was paid for the first locomotive in China. It weighed twenty-two hundredweight. The rails were about the size of walking-sticks and lay thirty inches apart. One day, after the seven-mile line had been operating only a few months, a trespasser was run over and killed by the little engine. The rails were promptly torn up and shipped to Formosa to rust, thus ending the fate of the first railroad in China.

That was only forty years ago. Now China has more than six thousand miles of railway, with a net revenue of more than eight million dollars a year. And C. C. Wang, of the government railway bureau, stands sponsor for this prophecy:

"It is no exaggeration to say that there will be more railways built in China during the coming twenty-five years than in all the rest of the world combined."—The Christian Herald.

NO WONDER HOGS ROOT

"Only a little more than half of a clover crop is above ground," says Farm and Fireside. "One crop expert has found that for every ton of clover hay cut, about, 600 pounds of root and stubble were left. This means that five ninths of the crop was cut and four ninths was left in the ground."

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.—Advertisement.
