PARTIAL SERVICE TO SUBURBS RESUMED

17 Cars Operating; Trolley-men Insist on Recognition of Union and Company Steadfastly Refuses to Treat With Them Except "as Individuals"; Strikers Say They Will Later Be Discharged if They Do Return to Work

With the refusal of President Frank B. Musser, of the Harrisburg Railways Company, to recognize the carmen's union formed in this city, and the reiterated statements by officials and members of the organization that they will not return to work until the union is recognized, settlement of the strike in this city is farther away than it has been since last Sunday when the men quit work.

President Musser, after his conference with a committee of the strikers, "as individuals" yesterday afternoon announced that he refused to talk except as representatives of the union. Mr. Musser then issued a statement that the strikers must apply for positions again, and then send a committee of employees to meet him on July 26, when he will discuss wage and working conditions and plan for adjustments of grievances.

This morning's strike leaders and members of the union declared positively that they will not go back to work "as individuals," bringing the probable solution of the situation to a standstill. The company will not recognize the union, officials state; the men will not return to work unless it is recognized, they insist.
