HARRISBURG merhants have shown a commendable spirit of co-operation and a keen interest in the welfare of their employes in deciding to join in a movement having for its object the closing of all stores Saturday afternoons and evenings during August, instead of Friday afternoons, as heretofore. The people of the city no doubt will co-operate fully by patronizing the stores as generously on Friday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and evenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and revenings as they do now on Saturday afternoons and night for recreation and Sunday for a day of rest and church attendance. The merchants doubtless did not this of it in that light, but they have done much to encourage a proper observance of the Sabbath by closing Saturday in July 1997. The Gulf stream had changed its too be a direct and dominant issue of the Sabbath by closing saturday for a dark proper observable while bathers are bewaring. The subject satisfaction of the stream is shifting its through the representatives of makers of New York and N thereby. Nothing has held the West Shore back so much as its school facilities, or lack of them. The schools days and six nights a week. Then we came to understand that business could be run just as profitably by keeping the stores open only one night a week, with a Friday half-holiday in summer, and we are about to find that Friday night will be quite as acceptable to buyers as Saturday night for shopping. Eventually we may come to the place where even one night a week of open shop may not be necessary, except on special of the stores of the stores and townships to be ack so much as its school facilities, or lack of them. The schools have been good, so far as they have came to understand that business could be run just as profitably by keeping the stores open only one night a week, with a Friday half-holiday in summer, and we are about to find that Friday night will be quite as acceptable to buyers as Saturday night for shopping. Harrisburg has never fallen short when called upon for any public help and we can only believe that the suden disappearance of the Mexican war cloud is responsible for the apparent lack of interest. That it is only apparent is evidenced, however, in the parent is evidenced, however, in the fact that on no other occasion has the fact that on no other occasion has the vouch for the truth of the assertion community failed to respond to all that two-thirds of the 200,000 automolegitimate appeals for succor. al comment in a Philadelphia news saper on the subject:

It cannot be that Philadelphia's apparent lack of interest in and sympathy for the dependent families of soldiers at the front is due to a want of patriotism or to any man of the same of the sympathy for the dependent of the call of duty, and that the honor of the community is involved for the protection of the personal interests they have left behind them. The only explanation must be sought in a widespread misunderstanding as to the attitude of employers and the continuation of wages to the men in the militia. While it is true that most of the target employing first the same of the target employing first most of the target employing the continuance of their pay and the assurance of positions after their return, these guarantees do not by any means meet all the conditions which arise. There are many of the men without the protection of regular employment, and these are bound to suffer through their sudden, enforced absence. The communition has meet a season plying for and needing relief, and the generous people of Philadelphia need have no doubt as to the genuineness of the need for help or the urgency of the appeals for money. It would be an ineradicable disgrace to the city were the appeals to be unanswered. We do not believe they will fall on deaf ears. Money is needed at once for the four hunder different the same of the continuance of this aged woman at the

The Bethlehem Steel Company, which is building a giant bridge over the Mississippi, has in its service thera a former Harrisburger, who in difficultimes of a flood gained flattering recognition and saved his company heavy loss by using his head and having trousing to carry our a well-conceived plan. "Tom" Baldwin, formerly of Steelton, who was married several months ago to Miss Montandon Norrica a niece of Mrs. H. M. Stine, of the story is told by Coyle Kennedy, of Chambersburg, son of Moorehead G. Kennedy, president of the Cumberland Valley railroad. Young Kennedy, who is working on the same job, is spending his vacction at the Plattsburg camp. It seems one whole pier of the new bridge was in danger of being washed away by the heavy flood. Baldwin called for volunteers among the men to follow him out and tie up the loose piece and make it safe. Each man was an element of danger which Baldwin reckoned with when he offered the men the special pay as individuals and without holding the company responsible for any accidents. To make a long story short the job was ably accomplished, fortunately without serious consequences, and it is the quiet belief of his friends that "Tom" will receive official recognition of his act if he has not already cone so.

"Would you mind teling me just what is litney etiquette?" asked a young man of a worldly wise woman yesterday.

"Here I am in a car and when I sit down all seats are taken. Two women stand on the sidewalk and beckon to the driver. He stops and looks right at me. What ought I to do?" he continued.

"Get out," responded the worldly wise one.
