Harris Cohen Dies at St. Louis, Aged 84; Has Picturesque Career

Harris Cohen, aged 84 years, one of Harrisburg's oldest market street merchants, who retired in February, this year, died yesterday in St. Louis at the home of his granddaughters, Mrs. Theodore Samuels and Mrs. Julian Samuels. These granddaughters, with Charles Goodman, a grandson, who resides at 408 North street, this city, were at the bedside when Mr. Cohen died. Death was due to a general breakdown due to old age following an operation which was performed several months ago. Shortly after his retirement Mr. Cohen went to St. Louis with a hope that the change would benefit his health. Mr. Cohen died last December as a result of a shock received when her home in South Fourth street was burned.

Started as Peddler
From a peddler, carrying his pack from town to town, to one of the most successful business men Harrisburg has had, and representing a number of Harrisburg's leading corporate interests, Harris Cohen was an interesting and picturesque character, whose rise in the business circles of local commercial life.

Ran Specialty Shop
Mr. Cohen's specialty was women's goods and for many years his store in Market street was the only business place outside of the larger cities carrying an exclusive stock of women's skirts, corset and other accessories.

Mr. Cohen was a member of Robert Burns Lodge, No. 47, Free and Accepted Masons, an influential member of Ohev Shalom Congregation and one of the charter members of the Harrisburg Board of Trade when it was organized in Strawberry street.
