

CHILD'S RIGHT TO COMPENSATION

Commissioner Leech Gives an Opinion in Which He Decides Questions

A child born after the death of its father is entitled to compensation under the act of 1915 and is to be paid the portion of the father's wages which the law directs until it reaches the age of sixteen years, according to an opinion filed by Compensation Commissioner James W. Leach in dismissing the right of the widow or widower to compensation by Referee W. B. Scott, of Philadelphia. In the case decided the defendant company appealed from an award made to the widow of a man killed while in its employ and to a child born six days after the father's death, contending that the child was not entitled to compensation.

"We can see no merit in this contention," says Mr. Leach. "In our opinion a child is entitled to compensation, as such, if at any time prior to its reaching the age of sixteen there should be no widow or widower entitled to compensation, whether this be because the deceased employe left no widow or widower or because the right of the widow or widower to compensation has been terminated by the expiration of the period during which such widow or widower is entitled to compensation or by his or her death or remarriage or for any other reason no compensation is due and payable to either of them."

Chairman Mackey has sustained Referee G. W. Beemer, of Scranton, who made an award from the time of the injury of a miner until the period when the man refused to be examined by an impartial physician.

QUARREL ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Reading, Pa., July 31.—In a fit of jealousy Newton Buchert, of Boyertown, shot his girl wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Maggie Hilbert, and then killed himself yesterday at their home in Boyertown. Mrs. Buchert is reported dying in a hospital in this city, but her mother, shot through the arm and jaw, is less dangerously wounded and will recover. The couple were quarreling when Mrs. Hilbert entered their room. Buchert ran to another room, and returning with a revolver began to shoot. His wife fell first, with a bullet through her left lung, shielding her 2-year-old son with her body. Mrs. Hilbert was next shot, and then Buchert turned the weapon on himself, dying instantly with a single bullet through his brain.
