Life at Plattsburg Described by Harrisburger

One of the Harrisburg boys in training at the Plattsburg military camp writes a letter home, dated last Sunday. He says: "Here we are with the camp practically over and nothing ahead of us save the hike, which will probably be in quick time. It is hard to realize that we're through; it seems only a few days since I came here. To-day has been lazy and our only duties being to get everything in shape for the march and also preparations for our return."

"We leave to-morrow (Monday) morning, about 7:30, and spend the first night near Anasick. Chasas I expect to have a wonderful time of it, and am anxious to see just what it is going to be like. Yesterday we had a parade of the entire four regiments with the artillery and cavalry also. I was in the third regiment in line and could see quite a bit. It was very inspiring and everyone remarked that for only three weeks or less of drill the men did wonderfully well."

Yesterday was quite busy, taking all in all, as we hiked out in the country for a maneuver in protection. Personally I was in the reserve force in one section and only had to march and sleep until the Cossack patrols reported back and the company formed the march in. Pretty soft."

Penbrook Paving Now Certainty; to Ask Bids

HARRISON CLAY, President of Penbrook Borough Council. Big Booster For Paving.

Paving for Main street in the Penbrook borough is now a certainty. Final action by Council was taken Monday, July 24. Legal notices of Council's actions are now being published and final notice will be given August 15. In the meantime E. Clark Cowden, borough engineer, will prepare plans and specifications, and after the approval of Council, bids will be asked for. The work will be completed before December 1. President Harrison Clay, of Penbrook Council, who has been one of the hard workers in the interest of this improvement said to-day: "This has been a two-year fight. The citizens of Penbrook are quite jubilant over the success of the paving plans, realizing more every day that it means increased valuation to properties. The paving will be sheet asphalt and the best that can be had. The section to be paved starts at Hoffer's lane and ends at Sherman's alley. It is 1,700 feet in length. The specifications also call for granolithic curbing."
