Page, manager of the Parks steel plant at Pittsburgh, was killed in an automobile accident here last evening. Mr. Page, with his cousin, Stanley Page, also of Pittsburgh, was traveling along the Lincoln Highway in a little Ford roadster and had reached the western border of town when the accident occurred. They had descended Seminary Hill, within the borough limits, when they had a blow-out on one of the front wheels at a place where the roadbed was not very good. The flat wheel striking the ground caused the machine to swerve to the left, going over a two-foot embankment, which turned the little car almost upside down and lodged it against a telephone pole. Stanley Page, who was driving, escaped serious injury, but his cousin George was thrown against the telephone pole, striking his head. The young man died in about an hour, never having regained consciousness.

All Cars Are Operated by Harrisburg Citizens

Within the past three weeks a few men from outside Cities have tried to inject themselves into the transportation situation of our City, and by so doing have caused good, honest Harrisburg citizens to lose their jobs and inconvenienced thousands who daily rely on the street cars of this company.

The declared purpose of these outsiders relates only incidentally to wages and hours of work. Demands as to these would apparently be waived if we would conceive the right of these outsiders to speak for our men. To accomplish their purpose, they would deprive between 60,000 and 70,000 people proper transportation facilities, and inflict a heavy loss and injury upon the business of our City.

This Company believes that it is charged with a great public duty—a duty to you—the people of Harrisburg, and to its loyal employes, a large majority of whom will not, and have not been misled by these outsiders.

We have, and always will meet our employes individually or collectively, now or any time, in order to adjust satisfactorily any difficulties that may arise.

Therefore, we ask you to help us and our loyal employes (Harrisburg citizens) to compel this outside organization to leave the operation of the street railways of our City in the hands of our loyal employes and the officers of this Company, who have successfully operated the street cars for many years.

To-day, we are operating practically all of our regular full time cars. No strike-breakers are employed. All conductors and motormen are Harrisburg citizens. Daily rowdiness, caused for a time by strike sympathizers as well as so-called striking employes, is dying out for the fundamental reason that public sentiment is against it.

And—
The passengers carried on our cars are increasing at a rate that insures our believing that you—the people—intend to reject this outside organization and send them on their way.
