HOFF'S FURNITURE STORE
HAS PROSPEROUS GROWTH Will Hold Session Next TuesPenrose Offers Resolution to day at the Commonwealth Hotel

For the first time since its organization last December, in Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Association of civilian employes of the Government

Among the large furniture stores that do business in Harrisburg even though not located in the city, is that of M. A. Hoff at New Cumberland. This store has had a successful career for many years. Four large floors are filled with the better grade of popular-priced furniture and many of the higher grade designs. A policy of the store has been to always pay the carfare to those who come to see, regardless of whether purchases were made, and freight is prepaid to all points within one hundred miles. This store was among the first to utilize motor cars for delivering the furniture to buyers in Harrisburg and vicinity. Recent alterations, decorations and new lighting fixtures have made the store room very attractive and in stock and appearance, this furniture store compares favorably with the leading ones in Central Pennsylvania.

Frank Boush has been associated with M. A. Hoff as manager of the store for several years, and having had ten years' experience in one of Harrisburg's large furniture stores preceding his going to the M. A. Hoff store, gives him a local acquaintance that has proven a desirable business asset for the store across the river.—Advertisement.

To date sixty-two of the seventy-six individuals and corporations licensed by the State Banking Commissioner to engage in the business of making small loans in accordance with the act of June 17, 1915, have become members.

Among the important things accomplished so far by the Association, has been its co-operation with State and county officials in the prosecution of individuals and corporations doing business in Philadelphia, Scranton and Pittsburgh, contrary to the law, the adoption of uniform papers, the inauguration of a State-wide educational publicity campaign, the employment of counsel for the purpose of sustaining the constitutionality of the law under which all its members operate, and the regulation of the conduct of its members for the purpose of up-lifting and dignifying the business.

KEENEY & SIMMONS HAVE WHAT YOU WANT OR WILL GET IT One of the growing business firms well known in Harrisburg is Keeney and Simmons, of New Cumberland, Pa. This firm which devotes its attention to real estate, fire and auto insurance, has through its efficient service built up in the past year an extensive clientele, and numbers in its lists many desirable properties.

A number of unusually attractive offerings in Cumberland and York county farms and homes for sale come in for special mention at this time. Anyone seeking a property in either of these counties is almost sure to find on the Keener & Simmons list some attractive listings at the price you want to pay. If not, mention of what is wanted will start the firm out to find the applicant just what is wanted, for Keeney & Simmons service doesn't end by offering what it has for sale. If they do not have what the applicant wants, they get it for him.—Advertisement.

From time to time prominent public officials engaged in the administration of the law have addressed the meetings in Philadelphia, testifying that the moral tone of the community in which the members of the association are engaged in business, has been elevated since the enactment of a law regulating the small loan business. Several prominent local officials have accepted invitations to address the meeting here next Tuesday, which will be attended by members of the Association from all parts of the State.

SMITHY TRADE IN FIVE YEARS

B. C. Murray, toolmaker and blacksmith, of 19 Jonestown Road, has an interesting story to tell of the rapid expansion of the business started about five years ago. Until that time Mr.
Murray was connected with a large corporation with little or no chances of advancement. He knew from his superiors that his work was wholly satisfactory so he reasoned that if he could make a profit for such a large corporation, he surely could put a business of his own on a paying basis.
When the business was first started finances were low and his only assets
were his expert knowledge of the toolmakers and smithy's trade and a firm resolution to stick to it through all the hard bumps he knew were quite fapt to come his way. By the application of the same careful principles of workmanship to his own trade he soon

Inhances were low and his only assets were his expert knowledge of the tool, makers and smithy's trade and a firm resolution to stick to it through all the hard bumps he knew were quite apt to come his way. By the application of the same careful principles of workmanship to his own trade he soon had a very neat little following of customers who always come back to him when tools needed dressing or resharpening, and they in turn told their friends. Soon, Mr. Murray, with all his long hours in the little shop was unable to take care of the every increasing patronage without help. He looked about him and finally located a mechanic of unusual ability, and the payroll of B. C. Murray was begun. To-day, five years later, Mr. Murray has five competent helpers employed in his blacksmith and machine shop and from all appearances new names will soon be added for the force is now working to full capacity. The business is not limited to that of tool, making or that of the smithy. The people of Harrisburg have learned to know that Mr. Murray has also acquired the necessary "know how" of sharpening all manner of keen-edged tools, including lawmmowers, scissors, knives, etc.—Advertisement.

Washington, Aug. 15.—A resolution introduced by Senator Penrose yesterday calls on the State Department for copies of all executive orders issued by President Wilson taking civil service positions out of the classified lists and asks for the names of all persons who have been covered into the civil service by executive order since July 1, 1912. Senator Penrose's perpose is to prove the assertion made by Charles E. Hughes that the civil service regulations have been abused by the Wilson administration. 'I have a copy of a blanket executive order made to cover temporary employes of the State Department into the civil service without examination.' said the Senator.
