Hot Water After Meals

Simple Cure For Indigestion and All Stomach Troubles

Call your stomach trouble by any name you will—indigestion, dyspepsia, or catarrh of the stomach—but the real and only cause is a sour, acid stomach. And the remedy is just as simple as the cause—after each meal drink half a tumblerful of hot water in which one or two teaspoonfuls of bicarbonate of soda have been dissolved. This absolutely counteracts all acidity of the stomach and gives natural and healthy digestion of the food, without any sour stomach or burning misery.

Magnesia has been the standard stomach remedy for years, and this new method of using bicarbonate of soda in hot water makes it twice as effective. It is not a mere digestive such as pepsin, etc., that acts artificially, with unpleasant after-effects. It neutralizes the sour acids in the stomach that causes fermentation of the food, and restores natural action so that the stomach will furnish its own fluids, regularly, copiously, and naturally, bringing back its own digestive power, the only way to cure stomach troubles. Your relief from stomach misery is here—just a little bicarbonate of soda in half a tumblerful of hot water after each meal.

It takes courage for a youthful clergyman to face an outraged congregation, knowing that the larger part of its resentment arises from jealousy. Louise Huff is the unconscious motive for this green-eyed demonstration on the part of the ladies in "Destiny's Toy," which is appearing at the Regent.

The story of the saw-dust ring, "The Clown," will be the attraction at the Regent to-morrow and Thursday. Victor Moore, the Laezy comedian, in the stellar role. The story of "The Clown" is said to be of gripping appeal, as it tells how the children's idol risks his life to save one of his little admirers, and later sacrifices his career to protect the honor of another. How he tries to better himself, and how he

A Clean, Cool Scalp Parisian Sage Stops All Odors and Keeps the Scalp Cool and Clean Almost everybody nowadays knows that Parisian Sage, the invigorating hair restorer, is guaranteed to cure dandruff, itching scalp, and itching scalp, or your druggist will give you your money back. But you ought to know more about this wonderful hair restorer. You ought to know that in five minutes after an application, no matter how hot the weather your head will be as cool as a cucumber. You ought to know also that it kills all odors which arise from the excursions of the scalp. Everyone ought to have a bottle of Parisian Sage on hand, because it is such a pleasant and exhilarating hair dressing. Ladies use it because they know it makes the hair beautiful, silky and soft. Here's what a New York woman writes: "I have used Parisian Sage two weeks only, yet in that time I find my hair has wonderfully increased in beauty, thickness and luxuriance. But what surprised me most was the disappearance of all dandruff." A large bottle of Parisian Sage never costs more than 50 cents at H. C. Kennedy's and is sold at drug and toilet counters everywhere.

Reimbursed in Bonds There was a sequel. Morgan later told Carnegie how magnanimously Schwab had acted. Carnegie remarked: "Charlie is the only man I know who would have done that." And he promptly sent Schwab in bonds the full amount of the contract. Carnegie has declared publicly since: "I owe my fortune chiefly to two men, 'Bill' Jones and Charlie Schwab. Schwab for years picked all the laborer when the eagle-eyed Schwab first spotted and promoted him. The only man to who the canny Scot ever gave carte blanche was Schwab. Schwab now is ranked as the greatest creative force in America. Also he is the best-liked businessman in the country. He has had more 'titles' conferred upon him than any other living American. For example, 'The World's Greatest Steelmaker,' 'The Most Successful Salesman Ever Born," "The Million-Dollar-Salary Man," "The Originator of the Steel Trust," "The Boy President," "The Developer of Young Men," "The Creator of the American Krupps," "The Defender of America," "The Incubator of Optimism," "The Bethlehem Miracle-Worker." Schwab's first real job was as a grocery boy in the store at Braddock, Pa., but from the first he had his eye on the great steel plant there, the Edgar Thomson Works, owned by Carnegie Brothers and Company. At that time he was earning $30 a month (without board). One day Captain William R. Jones, superintendent of the steel works, the right-hand man of Andrew Carnegie, and the best-known steelmaker in the country, stepped into the store. "I asked 'Bill' for a place in the mill," Mr. Schwab relates. "He asked me: 'Can you drive stakes?' I replied: 'I can drive anything. I started driving stakes next morning at a dollar a day.' In six years the dollar-a-day stake driver was superintendent of the works then the foremost steelmaking plant in America. Reaches Top of Ladder His next step was to the head of the engineering department of the whole Carnegie organization. Here he taught the industry a new wrinkle. He conceived and planned a greater steel plant than any then in existence, the Homestead Steel Works, on the principle of feeding the raw materials at one end, keeping it in continuous motion, and having it come out in the form of the finished products at the other end—a system since widely adopted in various industries and carried to its highest pitch by Henry Ford in his automobile factory at Detroit. At this time he had some 6000 or 7000 men under his command. All this at twenty-four. Election to the presidency of the Carnegie Company, the greatest prize of the whole steel industry, was his reward for accomplishing satisfactorily the nerve-racking problem of reopening the Homestead works after the terrible strike of 1892. This was fifteen years after his debut as a dollar-a-day stake driver. At thirty-five Schwab stood on top of the steel ladder. A large suggestion the billion-dollar United States Steel Corporation was formed, with Schwab as its president and the owner of $28,000,000 (par value) of its capital stock. This at thirty-nine. He was "the boy president." On resigning in impaired health at the end of three strenuous years—after he had got the billion-dollar machine working as efficiently as outside interference would permit—he announced: "I propose to devote my whole attention to regaining my strength and won't take any position until it is restored." His Success With Partners The Bethlehem Steel Company was bankrupt when Schwab took hold of it the last time—he bought control once before, when he was with the Steel Corporation, sold out to the ill-fated United States Shipbuilding Company and took it back when that enterprise collapsed. Mr. Schwab thus tells of his experience with employees: "When I took hold of Bethlehem the second time I didn't take one well-known steel man from anywhere. I selected fifteen young men right out of the mill and made them my partners. I believe in profit-sharing—I believe it will ultimately settle the labor problem. Andrew Carnegie was the most successful profit-producer in this country, and he gave his employees half of his profits in bonuses. "If you want anything well done in life, don't engage a man of great reputation to do it. Get a man who has his reputation to make; he will give you his best individual, undivided effort. "Of the fifteen I selected, not one has proved a failure. I am proud of that and proud of them. One of them was a crane fitter at $75 a month. He is now earning five times as much as any other steel employe in the United States and is several times a millionaire. This is Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Company, and the man chiefly responsible for its success. He is fifty times the man I ever was." Schwab recently was offered $53,000,000 for his holdings—said to be approximately 90,000 preferred and 60,000 common—with the choice of remaining head of the company for ten years. The offer "did not even tempt him. Money is not his goal. His
