DR. JACKSON GOES AFTER THE CROOKS

Commissioner of Labor Seeking to Break Extortion Among the Labor Foremen

An investigation, aimed to protect alien employes and native workers in industries from extortion or other frauds practiced by some foremen and petty bosses in industrial plants, unknown to the heads of the establishments, has been under way for some time under the direction of Commissioner John Price Jackson of the Department of Labor and Industry.

As a result of the investigation, conducted through the employment bureau, of the labor department, a foreman, employed in a manufacturing plant, in the western part of the state, was arrested in Pittsburgh.

Seven affidavits have been obtained, by agents of the labor department, from Italian laborers who allege that the foreman had been obtaining $10 on each payday, for a period of approximately two years, from five workers.

Another affidavit, from a laborer, alleges that he was compelled to pay $4 to the foreman to obtain a job in addition to a bonus every payday. The labor department has the full cooperation of the heads of industrial plants and labor leaders in conducting the investigation.

Commissioner Jackson has ordered the investigation under the authority granted by the employment act passed by the last Legislature. Section 19, empowers the commissioner to investigate all improper practices with respect to frauds against employes and aliens.

ST. REMY BADLY DAMAGED

Rheims, France, Aug. 22.—An inspection of the famous church of St. Remy shows that it was damaged in numerous places by the recent bombardment which destroyed the civil hospital. Cardinal Lucon is among those who still remain here. He was found on Sunday alone and kneeling in prayer on a heap of debris from the cathedral. In spite of the noise of the cannonading then in progress the cardinal declared he intended to remain in Rheims and would not desert the city under any circumstances.

TOBACCO HABIT

GUARD RECALL LIKELY BY NOV. 1

Administration Hopes Mexico Can Guarantee Protection by That Time

Guard Has Served Two Months on Border

May 9 — President calls out National Guard of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico to patrol border.
June 18 — President calls militia from all other States to strengthen border patrol.
June 23 — Pennsylvania Guardsmen ordered to mobilization camp.
June 29-July 8 — Pennsylvania troops move to El Paso.
July 28 — United States accepts Carranza proposal for joint high commission to settle differences with Mexico.
August 21 — Militia has been at border two months.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The administration hopes to withdraw the National Guard from the Mexican border by November 1. This hope, according to persons close to the Administration, is based on the belief that the joint commission to settle the Mexican disputes will be able to complete its work by the end of October.

The representatives of the United States and of the defacto government of Mexico are expected to complete their task of settling the points at issue without lengthy parleys. This settlement will include guarantees of the Carranza government of the safety of life and property of foreigners in Mexico, it is indicated.

It is planned to withdraw the regular army troops from Mexican soil and to have them continue on patrol duty on the border. This will give Major General Funston about 11,000 more regulars than he has now on a similar duty, and would permit the demobilization of the entire National Guard.

Secretary of War Baker yesterday, in answering a score of letters from many parts of the country complaining that the State troops were being held in service after the emergency for which they were called out apparently had passed, intimated that it was the Administration's policy to keep the National Guard on the border only so long as American lives and property are in danger.

By its presence on the border, he wrote to one, the guard is "winning bloodless victories daily." He declared that Americans resident along the international line were enjoying a peace and security they could not know without the military forces to protect them.

The department appreciates, Mr. Baker said in another letter, the fact that a call for military service upon militia organizations must "inevitably present cases of hardship." He added: "The emergency, however, which required this call for the militia was one of a grave character, affecting the safety and lives of citizens of the United States—men, women and children."

The presence of the militia on the Mexican border has restored order and given a higher degree of safety and security to the lives of our people in that troubled country than they have for a long time had. The militia is, therefore, performing a valuable service; and the fact that this service is being performed without active military operations entailing loss of life and property is cause of congratulation and happiness."

Referring to the elaborate and extensive training the militiamen are receiving under supervision of regulars from the State troops, he expressed the opinion that it would fit them to act in time of war or other emergency as a supporting arm, or second line, for the regular army, furnished at the expense of the Government that could not have been obtained otherwise.

can policy. The United States put forward, and put through, the Open Door policy. The gist of the Open Door is that China is to be left alone. She is to retain all her territory and all her sovereignty. No nation is to get any special favors and all nations are free to compete at will for Chinese trade.

that America stands for in China. This commercial arrangement is all she has wanted in the past, and all she wants to-day.

Given an equal chance, the legitimate business that we might do in China is staggering in its proportions. There is enough of it to make all the difference in crucial periods between national hard times and national prosperity.

China's chief need to-day is for railroads. At a conservative estimate there is room for the investment of five billion dollars in Chinese railways. China can by no possibility supply the capital, the materials or the technical skill necessary to their construction. Yet they are as badly needed for the development of the country as were our own transcontinental lines that opened up the West, or as the Canadian Pacific was needed by Canada. China knows it. She is anxious to have them built. There are only four nations on earth who have capital to build any considerable portions of these lines, who can supply the engineers to see to their building and turn out the rails and the rolling stock necessary to their operation. Those nations are France, Germany, England and the United States. Allowing for the share of the smaller industrial nations, it is putting a low estimate on our business acumen to say, that with our capital, our trained technical men and our steel plants, we would secure only one-fifth of the business.

If we did secure that fifth, matters would proceed somewhat in this fashion. The Chinese government would issue railway bonds to raise the necessary capital. Those bonds would be offered for sale in the United States. Any man with five hundred or a thousand dollars to invest could put it into a Chinese railway bond guaranteed by a stable Chinese government. If China boated a billion dollars worth of railway bonds in the United States, it would mean first that this country would draw an annual fifty millions in interest alone, to be added to the wealth of the nation at large.

Of the billion dollars thus raised in the United States, however, a large proportion would thus be spent in the United States at once. All the necessary materials of construction, all the rails and cars and locomotives, would be purchased in American mills and car shops. Whole industries would receive a big impetus, that would be reflected not only in those industries but throughout the nation, exactly as the munition prosperity is being reflected to-day. Not only would employment be given to thousands of workers in the United States but many of our young men would find opportunity in the Chinese construction work itself.

The business thus started would be a steady one, not a boom to flourish and die. The railroads would need a continual supply of fresh material for upkeep and extension. The orders from such railroads as were financed in the United States would come to the United States to be filled, year after year. The orders would grow steadily, not diminish.
