SILVER SANDALS

A Detective Story of Mystery, Love and Adventure. By Clinton H. Stagg. Copyright, W. J. Watt & Co., International News Service.

CHAPTER V

The House of Mystery

Thornley Colton's slim fingers unrolled the alcohol-soaked bandage that covered his sightless eyes and forehead, saturated with sweat from the bottle at his elbow, and carefully replaced it. For five hours the blind man had sat in his chair before the oak desk in the hotel, and within the fashionable uptown house, his mind visualizing each separate piece of the new crime puzzle...

THE FEEL WITH SUSPICIOUS DISPATCH

"Yes, sir, Mr. Colton?" There was an eagerness in the boy's voice that told plainly Shrimp hadn't been out of ear-shot. "Hat, coat, and stick, Shrimp!" "Yes, sir, here they are, Mister Colton," the boy held them out.

MICHAEL DROVE THE BIG CAR SLOWLY

Michael drove the big car slowly through the twisting streets, stopping at the narrow corner where Sydney Thames had alighted early the same morning in the chauffeur's motor car. "Down this street, to the first turn on the left," he said.

"WAIT," SAID THE PROBLEMATIST TO THE CHAUFFEUR

"Wait," said the problematist to the chauffeur, and with the touch of the boy's sleeve against his arm, he walked forward. To the boy there was nothing impossible, nothing too difficult, no case too complex, for the master mind of the man he worshipped.

"GEE, I HOPE SO!" THE BOY DARTED OUT

"Gee, I hope so!" the boy darted out then, to obey the order. In the dark of the district in which he had left Sydney Thames, had overthrown a complete theory; necessitated a whole new structure in place of the one that had toppled in the night.

"MICHAEL SAID 'I TOOK HIM FOR A MERE'!"

"Michael said 'I took him for a mere'!" he muttered huskily. "Do it for a quarter, wonder Silver Sandals is past, present, and future. Love, luck, money, lucky days, an' women. First name, horoscope, picher of yer wife, spirit control, hypnosis, an' mind-reading. Slats 'n' slats 'n' cabinet n' mystery, an' wishin' charms. One dollar, two dollars, an' five. Can't make a mistake, or your money back. Best of our kind in the world. An' my def- and-dumb slar-vint 'n' America. Guidechu, sir, a quarter."

"SHE'S A THOUSAND IF SHE'S A DAY!"

"She's a thousand if she's a day!" declared the guide, figuring that the tone of the blind man was worth at least an extra quarter, and determining to give full value. "I been in this section twenty years, an' she's here when I come. Folks said she'd always been here. She got a crow what talks fer her that's older'n she is. Says it's a carnation how she fingers a crow."

"WHERE DO YOU GET THAT IDEA?"

"Where do you get that idea?" asked Colton sharply. "Have the panner got her connected with the dead?" "No, sorr." Michael hastily disabused the blind man's mind of any such impression. "The mornin' papers have a bit, 'twas too late for them. They know 'n' the man was nor the woman wid him. They couldn't even seem to find out how he got into the hotel. As fer the girl she went out even writ about. But Sydney foller'n her, an' you at the hotel." Michael drew that his own astuteness was obvious.

"WHAT'S THAT, SORR?"

"What's that, sorr?" The chair creaked as he leaned forward. "You can take me to where you left Sydney?" the problematist asked. "Sure, sorr. 'Twas old Cath-rine street, or thereabouts."

RETIRED SOLDIERS

TO BE GIVEN JOBS

U. S. Explains How Men May Take Advantage of Offers in Civil Life

Washington, Aug. 26.—A policy of caring for federal soldiers upon retirement to civil life, patterned after that of the British government which secured employment for enlisted men retiring from the army, has just been inaugurated by the United States.

RECRUITING OFFICERS ARE NAMED

Recruiting officers are named in twenty-three States through whom applications for Federal employment. The pamphlet emphasizes the fact that the army offers exceptional advantages to those who desire to themselves for. It also contains a long list of positions in the filling of which former soldiers will be given preference.

ELECTRICAL ROLL CALL FOR CONGRESS

to avoid making a record for continual absence from roll calls. And that brings to the fore the biggest problem in the present-day deliberations of the House of Representatives, but very perceptibly, it is changing from a deliberative body, where legislation is debated and formulated, to one of clerks and agents, who appear to be more interested in and hinders to tell them how they shall vote, and spend their own time attending to a multitude of details for various districts.

FORMERLY, THE HOUSE WAS A GREAT DEAL SMALLER

Formerly, the House was a great deal smaller; there was no House office building; the members had their offices scattered all over Washington. John's men, all attended every session of Congress.

NOW THE OFFICE BUILDING IS RIGHT ACROSS THE STREET FROM THE CAPITOL

Now the office building is right across the street from the Capitol. During the ordinary sessions of the House, the members of the House, earnestly arguing. A vote is desired. Electrical bells are rung that sound through all the corridors of the House.

THEY WOULD BE GLAD TO GET OUT OF THE HOUSE

They would be glad to get out of the House if they were not in it. The men who really give most of their time to national legislation spend a great deal more than the government does in order to build a bridge across Frog Creek in Summerset County, Missouri, or appropriating a hundred and fifty thousand dollars to erect a postoffice at Watertown, Nevada.
