"THEIR MARRIED LIFE"

"Do you know what I'd like to do?" Helen said as they finished their dessert. "No, I don't," Warren returned. "What would you like to do?" Warren was in a particularly good humor. The weather had turned cooler, he had had a good dinner, and so was disposed to treat his wife accordingly. "Well, let's take a bus and ride on it the whole evening."

boy still hovered under her and watched her movements eagerly. When he saw her draw out the coins, he gave a joyous whoop, and immediately drew the attention of the others to the front of the bus. Helen leaned way over the side and began to throw the pennies. She was shamelessly partial, and threw them as far as possible in the way of her favorite. Warren was watching her disapprovingly, and when she threw one of the nickels he protested openly. "What are you thinking of? I never heard of such foolishness."

It would be impossible to find a smarter costume than this one for formal afternoon wear. The combination of taffetas with trimming of velvet ribbon and lace is very beautiful, and in design and style the gown is absolutely new and absolutely smart. For the medium size the gimppe will require, 2 1/2 yards of material 44 inches wide, and the bodice with tunic, 4 1/4 yards 36 or 44. For the skirt will be needed, 1 1/2 yards 36 or 44; it is 3 yards in width at the lower edge. For the trimming will be needed, 3 yards of banding for each row at lower edge of the tunic and 6 yards of narrow banding for the upper edge, the bodice and the sleeves.

Cardinal Gibbons Fears Severity Toward Capital

Spring Lake Beach, N. J., Aug. 29.—"The laborer is worthy of his hire, but if we are too severe toward capital we will beggar the nation," said Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, when interviewed yesterday at Ballinray, the Spring Lake estate of Martin Maloney, a papal marquis, who entertains him every August. This remark grew out of a question put to the cardinal bearing upon the present misunderstanding between the railroad managers and their men, which he did not care to discuss at this time.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain multifid cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage. You can get multifid cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

creates a social order pleasing to God, the source of all authority." He said teaching the small boy the thought that he is as good as any other individual is wrong because "inequality stimulates energy among men." The cardinal said that all members of his church were working for the integrity and the great destiny of the United States. Cardinal Gibbons smilingly admitted that he had never seen a motion picture, and expressed the opinion that if they were educational in nature they would be of benefit. When asked what he thought of Henry Ford's peace propaganda, Cardinal Gibbons made the same reply which he gave to the Detroit pacifist when he called upon him in Baltimore: "You have many rocks ahead of you."

The limb is badly swollen and he is in a weakened condition from lack of food and water. DEMOCRATS ADD PUBLIC BURDENS

Oliver Asserts Revenue Measure Will Hit Poor as Well as Rich

Washington, D. C., Aug. 29.—Asserting that the workingmen of the country would have to share the burden of Democratic extravagance along with the rich, Senator George T. Oliver, of Pennsylvania, in a vigorous speech on the floor of the Senate yesterday pointed out that in the final analysis the weight of heavy taxation imposed by the revenue bill now pending would be shouldered by every person in the country "according to the proportion of their respective abilities." The bill, which carries appropriations and authorizations totaling more than $2,000,000,000, Senator Oliver declared to be "radically and basically wrong." He denounced as farcical the claims of Democratic leaders to the effect that the heavy impositions of the bill would fall upon the rich only. Senator Oliver pointed to a protective tariff as the only medium of lightening the burden of direct taxation imposed by the Democrats and showed the inconsistency of the present Congress in providing for a protective tariff on dyestuffs while allowing other important industries to go unprotected from the ravages of cheap foreign competition. He cited the official figures of the Department of Commerce to show that although there had been enormous increases in importations under the Underwood law, such increases were marked by a sharp decline in revenues paid into the treasury. This deficiency, the Pennsylvania Senator declared, was now being made up by heavy direct taxation upon the American people. Mr. Oliver, in the course of his speech, referred caustically to the weather-vane tendencies of President Wilson's views of national policies, and cited several instances to show that the Chief Executive's opinions of to-day were in many cases diametrically opposed to those which he held when at Princeton University. Mr. Oliver said that in view of the failure of Democratic economic measures it was a cause of wonder why the President had not again changed his mind with reference to the means of raising revenue.
