DANCING BAREFOOT ON THE SANDS IS HELPING CALIFORNIA BEAUTIES ABSORB VITALITY AND ELECTRICALITY FOR BETTER HEALTH

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 4. — "Have you done your sand dance today?" This is the phrase that has taken the place of "How do you do" at the beach towns surrounding Los Angeles.

If you haven't shuffled over the wet sand in your bare feet for at least thirty minutes, you brand yourself as being indifferent to teeming vitality that makes giants of pigmies.

Should an innocent newcomer ask for information it is given in large chunks, liberally dosed with scientific terms. Here is what the heavy conversation all means:

Bloom's Our New Store Opens To-morrow TUESDAY AT 1:00 P. M. With a Complete New Line of CLOAKS, SUITS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS. B. Bloom 19 North Third Street

Advertisement for Southern California Maids' Dance Bare-footed on Beaches. It features illustrations of women dancing barefoot on sand and text describing the health benefits of the practice. Key phrases include 'Ball-room dances are utilized in taking the sand cure' and 'There is no age limit for the health seekers.'

radio current that routs disease and brings buoyant health. "If you do a barefoot dance in the sand daily, you soon will be soaring in spirit and so charged with energy that you will want to leap from skyscraper to skyscraper instead of walking around ordinary sidewalks." Devotes by hundreds are prancing, dancing and chasing each other over the beaches and scores are taking up the new fad daily.

Babies are kept barefooted all day; the new, nifty bathing socks have been discarded by girls, and staid matrons do not hesitate to shuffle gently along the less crowded parts of the beaches, shoes and stockings tucked under their arms. The newest fad was started innocently enough. During the course of a talk on Nature Study, J. Hartley Colburn, a distinguished Englishman visiting friends at Ocean Park, told an audience of women how nice Nature is about sharing her blessings if only the secret were known. He talked profoundly of the vibrations of the earth, of the sun and of the human body, all being ligated in harmony. It was hard to remember all he said about the vibrating tricks of the universe, but easy to act on the suggestion of dancing barefooted in the sand, churned by the gentle Pacific.
