FARMER SEWS UP EYES OF HOG THAT ATE CHICKENS

Lambertville, N. J., Sept. 11.—Because his family for generations had followed the practice, Joseph Leigh, a Pleasant Valley farmer, told Magistrate C. C. Johns he could see no wrong in sewing up the eyes of the hogs on his farm to prevent them from eating his chickens. According to the story the police say Leigh told in court, the pigs on his farm have a special liking for young chickens and had learned to catch and devour the feathered stock. He said his father had taught him the method of stitching up the eyelids of the pigs to prevent them from seeing chickens. As they did less wandering in their blindness, the hogs also seemed to fatten faster.

Blubber, Penguin, Limpets and Seaweeds as Diet Kept Shackleton Crew Alive

London, Sept. 11.—Life on Elephant Island in the Antarctic, as it was experienced by the marooned men of Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton's South Polar expedition, who recently were rescued and taken to Chile, is described in a message received from Punta Arenas, and published in the Daily Chronicle. "The day began," says the description, "with breakfast, which consisted of a little of penguin, fried in blubber, with a drink of water. The morning's duties consisted in clearing away snow-drifts and catching penguin. Lunch was served at 1 o'clock, consisting of a biscuit with raw blubber and a tin of condensed milk. At 3 o'clock when darkness set, came dinner, consisting of penguin breast and beef tea. Lacking tobacco the men smoked grass from the padding in their boots, while the pipes were carved from birds' bones and wood. The members of the party took turns in reading aloud from the only available books, the Bible, and encyclopaedia. Browning's Poems, Essays and Carlyle's French Revolution. Saturday evening was always marked by a concert, the feature of which was banjo playing. A banjo was the only musical instrument in camp. "On one occasion there was a welcome addition to the diet, when several undigested fish were found in the stomach of a seal and greatly enjoyed. These were the only fish obtained during our stay. In August there was a change in the diet when limpets were gathered and seaweed was available as a vegetable. We were in the midst of one of these seaweed lunches when the rescue boat was sighted. "When was the war over?" was the first question we asked."

Harrisburg Rotary Club Hears About Plattsburg Benefits

"Plattsburg" was the subject of an interesting talk by E. J. Stackpole, Jr., before the Harrisburg Rotary Club today at its luncheon at the Columbus hotel. Mr. Stackpole has spent the past two summers at Plattsburg training camp and is enthusiastic in his belief in its practical benefits in a physical and mental way as well as its value as an arm of the great preparedness program of the nation. "Men of every walk of life are thrown together, with no favoritism for anybody and I cannot think of any influence more conducive to true democracy than the associations at Plattsburg. Those who attend learn how to be good privates in the ranks and then how to be officers. Men go to camp pale and run down and they come back physically fit and ready for a winter of hard work." Mr. Stackpole noted that in three years the attendance from Harrisburg at Plattsburg had increased from nothing to 25 and made a plea for more recruits next season.
