

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

Pampering Your Children

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1916, Star Company. You not deny yourself comforts and pleasures in order to give your children a course of action, and almost invariably the result is injurious to the best interests of the children and of society at large.

I met two young women to whom a fortune had been left, and knew what sacrifices their dead parents had made to give them the luxuries and advantages they were enjoying, and I studied them with care. Two more arrogant, selfish and unlovable young women I have rarely encountered. They made frequent references to "common people" and spoke patronizingly of the "middle classes."

Silver Sandals

A Detective Story of Mystery, Love and Adventure. By Clinton H. Stagg

"I found it where you had dropped it — at the home of your aunt. You tried to catch the bird, but something had frightened it, probably the secretary. You got a feather — only a feather!"

"You are trying to frighten me!" she exclaimed, in sudden, vehement defiance. She was fighting again. "You are guessing. You found the feather in the hotel suite. I know it!"

"Certainly!" The admission was grave. "But the feather that brought you here I picked up from the chess table in my study before I went to the hotel to-night. I said that McMan did not find the feather, because he did not know where to look for it. Until the moment I showed you the feather it was in my pocket. The whole purpose of it was to tell 'some one' that I had the crow. I knew 'some one' would try to get it. The finding of the hair on my desk when I returned to look for the feather. But I knew it would suggest to the mind of 'some one' the possibility of sending you here. How it got there I don't know."

Colton lifted the cigarette to his lips. "May I smoke?" he asked. She nodded shortly. He still waited, and she almost snapped an affirmative. He lit the cigarette carefully, slowly. There was a curious expression of respect on his face. Never before had he met a person who fought so long and so gamely. A half-dozen times he had tried to knock her down, but he had brought her to her knees. She had recovered each time, fighting bravely, but fighting, fighting every instant.

"You were frightened last night," he declared. "Something made you hurry from the house of Silver Sandals before you could catch the crow. But you left George Nelson here. He, with his poor, befogged brain, was to bring Rameses." He paused, but there was no sound to tell him whether or not the mention of the crow's name had affected her. "You were waiting for him. Probably there was some trickery to impress him with the truth of a very strange thing; a thing that I have been working to do since the unexpected turning of the case. But Sydney showed that he did not believe, and that frightened Silver Sandals. She made him another pawn. My blindness, and mental visualization, had made necessary, enabled me to 'see' that when I found my secretary at police headquarters. That changed the whole game. It became a game for blood."

"Blood," she repeated, and again there was the peculiar note of triumph in her voice. "Do you know I have a pistol pointed straight at your head?" His head inclined slowly. "You don't realize how keen my ears are," he said, with just 'the faintest of smiles. "I've been very interestedly watching for several seconds. The hammer snapped a thread in the pocket lining when it caught!"

"Where is the crow?" she demanded. He heard her rise, take a step toward him, then an unexpected turn of the case. "My boy put him to bed," the blind man announced calmly. "All afternoon he had been listening to him and 'taking notes of the crow's words.' The crow was steady and hard. She was very close to him. He felt the muzzle of the pistol as she held it against his chest."

"Are they here?" He picked them up from the desk behind him and held them tantalizingly before her for an instant before he held them high above her reach. "At once!" The thin lips of the blind man tightened, even the blind eyes seemed to grow colder as they looked down at her face. "You shall have them," he said grimly, "when I have talked to your husband, Mrs. Bracken!"

CHAPTER XIV A Revelation It seemed a long, long time that they stood, unmoving; the girl, her long hair sweeping the shoulders of the man's rough coat as she wore; Thornley Colton, the notes held high over his head, his eyes apparently watching her face. Then the blind man dropped his cigarette into the tray behind him and raised his hand. The girl stood motionless as he gently unclasped her fingers from the pistol. "I didn't think you'd use it," he said quietly, "but I'd have taken it when I felt the weight in your pocket as I lifted you."

The customs officials are extremely deplorable in their manner. It is their duty to search every article of luggage. These two days Burton Holmes Travel Pictures and the Italian Corner of Austria, will also be shown.

Wednesday and Thursday — Mae Murray and Theodore Roberts will be presented in "The Dream Girl."

At the Orpheum on Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee. "The Yoke" will be presented for the first time in this city. "The Yoke" has brought forth much discussion from all classes. WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sleep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always." Mrs. FETTER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Stomach, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are just what is needed by every woman who is in Mrs. Marco's condition. For free advice in regard to any annoying symptom write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. For ACCURATE Telephone Service

The Automatic Telephone System—now being installed by the Cumberland Valley Telephone Company—always gives you the number you dial.

The old manual system cannot help but make mistakes and "A miss is as good as a mile." You know how you feel when you ask for the number of a Market street store and get the man who runs a coal yard twenty blocks from Market street. Little Miss Operator MEANS to give you the number you want — but the plug slips and gets into the wrong hole. Sometimes these "wrong number" calls come to YOU, occasionally in the middle of the night when you dare not ignore them. Eh?

Use the Automatic

It means accurate telephone service for you have a machine absolutely under your control. You suffer no "wrong number" embarrassments. You do not have to "wait your turn" to get immediate service. You need not fear to discuss confidential business. The Automatic is sure, swift, secret, accurate.
