NEW "TANKS" ARE THINGS OF HORROR

know that as a contribution to modern warfare they have proved themselves serious. Prisoners declare they are not civilized warfare. Officer prisoners are angry at the subject, as if they had never heard of poisonous gases, flamethrower (fire shooters), torpedoing passenger ships, dropping bombs on open cities, and the like. The enemy evidently had no hint what they wanted their rifles as the things came rolling on. They turned the machine guns on and the bullets only struck sparks. Still the moving horrors came on until they reached the first German trench.

There in several places they sat complacently astride the trench and swept it in both directions and all the ground beyond with their machine guns. In some cases the enemy surrendered from the trenches to the levithian itself before the infantry came up.

On their first day in one short hour they did more military work than had more of the enemy, had a greater influence on the war than all the Zeppelins had ever done. This time the diabolical machine is ours and nothing if not entirely civilized. It is armed with every convention ever signed. It has scored heavily.

British Trench Hurdling Monsters Made in U. S. A.; Can Brush Trees Aside

Washington, Sept. 19. — The British "tanks," the armored motorcars used in recent assaults on German trenches in northern France so successfully as to attract world-wide attention, were built, for the most part, in Peoria, Ill., in the form of caterpillar tractors designed many years before the war began to meet some of the difficult problems of modern farming.

Except for their armor, their machine guns and their crews, thousands like them are in use to-day in the United States in plowing, digging ditches and other labors less heroic than war.

M. M. Baker, vice-president of the Holt Manufacturing Company, explained here that they were machines made by his company at its Peoria plant that had hurdled German trenches, walked through forests and crawled over shell craters in the face of intense gun fire.

"We have sold about 1,000 caterpillar tractors to the British government," said Mr. Baker. "We have had nothing to do with putting armor on them, or placing machine guns on them, or placing them in the trenches." He said that the British Government intended to armor some of the tractors and use them for work other than the usual towing of big guns.

"Germany had some of these tractors before the war began, and although I do not understand just how it occurred, believe she may have got others since then. We have sent some to France and some to Russia. So far as I know, up until the recent appearance of the armored cars the tractors were sent only to tow big guns. I understood that Germany used about forty of them in this work before Liege early in the war and recent photographs show that the British are using some of them now for the same purpose."

for you. It is indeed a gem. When the masterly violin of Kreisler joins the pure tenor of McCormack—wonderful is the result! Thousands on thousands of Victor customers await these duet records with eager expectancy—well knowing that each is a musical triumph. This month the two great artists join in an interpretation of the "Barcarolle" from Tales of Hoffman. It is a languorous, dreamy, melancholy and immortally beautiful love song made greater still by the magic art of McCormack and Kreisler.

A great soprano and a grand old hymn

"Lead, Kindly Light." How often have you heard it sung! And how often again will you want to hear it as Farrar sings it! Beautiful as Cardinal Newman's composition is in itself, inspiring as it is always, its appeal is irresistible when expressed through the gifted soprano of Farrar.
