REAL ESTATE WEAVER'S STORE WILL MOVE SOON

City's Oldest Confectionery to Seek New Location; Long at Same Stand

When Weaver's Confectionery removes from its present location at 24 North Third street to a room now being rented at 29 North Second street, it will mean the removal of the oldest established business in Third street.

Prior to and during the Civil War there stood at the corner of Third and Strawberry avenue a wagon-maker's shop owned by R. J. Fleming who in 1865 built the present College Block, at that time the most imposing business building in the city.

The first business to occupy the new structure was a confectionery store started in 1866 by John Wise who, after a short time was succeeded by Gardner and Sayford and they conducted the store for about two years when it was taken over by Samuel M. Sayford himself.

In Mr. Sayford's employ was a young man, John S. Weaver by name, who was destined later on to be the owner of the store. On January 21, 1873, Mr. Weaver formed a partnership with Alpheus T. Hubley, a young drygoods clerk, under the name of Weaver & Hubley and they continued the business without change until the death of Mr. Hubley on January 13, 1907 when Mr. Weaver purchased his partner's entire interest from Mr. Hubley's estate and after making several thousand dollars worth of improvements, conducted the store until the time of his death on March 17, 1915.

The business was then bought by E. P. Weaver, a nephew of the former owner, who admitted as a partner J. Gilbert Aldinger, continuing under the name of Weaver's Confectionery.

Three generations of Harrisburg folks have bought their fancy cakes, pastry and confections from this old established store, the older people remembering the toothsome cakes and dainties made by Louis Ebel, the head baker for more than twenty years, John P. Aldinger, the present head baker was an apprentice of Mr. Ebel and has been in the employ of the house for more than thirty years, and has at present two assistants in the bakery where the delicious pies, cakes and pastry are made fresh every day for the many patrons of the place.

In addition to the new store in Second street which will be ready for occupancy in the course of a few weeks a branch store has been opened at 1720 North Third street to supply the uptown trade with fresh goods every morning.
