PUSH WORK ON NARROWS ROAD

Contractors Believe Job Will Be Finished by First of Year

Motorists who use the highway to the north of Harrisburg through Dauphin and Duncannon will be glad to learn that work is being pushed on the new road, which, when completed, will do away with the congestion that for years has made a nightmare of the Dauphin Narrows for timid passengers. McManus & Co., the contractors, have estimated that the work will be completed by the first of the year, but at any rate the road will surely be open for spring motoring.

The trees have been chopped down, stones have been removed from what will eventually be the roadbed, and carpenters are now working on the trestling which will carry the track for the excavating. Thirty-inch tile has been placed for the purpose of carrying the water through the fill and a steam shovel is in readiness for action, waiting on a siding. A lot of industrial cars are on hand and this morning a number of new dump trucks were unloaded. Thirty men, mostly Mexicans, are at present on the job. This staff will be increased later.

When the work is finally completed there will be a three-foot wall along the edge of the river supporting the twenty-five-foot width of roadway which will extend south from Clark's Ferry to the railroad crossing on the other side of the Narrows. There a subway will be dug out, connecting the new roadway with the present highway. The Northern Central Railway has undertaken the expense of fixing up the road in return for title to the land on which their present tracks are located. The new road will be completed on completion of the new road. The old canal bed will practically lose its identity also through being taken up by the highway, which will be widened on completion of the new road. The old canal bed will practically lose its identity also through being taken up by the highway, which will be widened on completion of the new road.

LABOR'S DEAL IS CRITICISED

Washington, D. C. — Condemning the action of the labor unions in their attempt to deliver the votes of organized labor to the Wilson Administration at the November election, the Republican Publicity Association, in a statement issued, shows that the efforts of labor leaders are assaults upon the purity of elections. The statement adds: "In return for special legislation for the benefit of a comparatively few people and against the interests of the general public, leaders of four labor unions are now endeavoring to deliver the votes of their members to the Wilson administration."

"Barter Frankly Alleged" "With a frankness never before displayed in the barter and sale of votes, labor leaders assert that the administration has used its official power in the interests of these men, and urges upon them the duty of delivering the vote. The price has been paid in legislation which provides for an increased wage, and the administration expects the vote to be recorded.

"There is not even a pretense that the wage increase was for the general welfare. The argument is based upon the fact that there was special legislation for special interests, and that these special interests should give the desired reward in 'unostentatious measure'."

"Thus we have an assault upon the purity of elections which no corrupt practices act can reach. We are confronted with the question whether it is the duty of Congress to legislate for the general welfare or for the interests of a few.

"The composite citizen, with no special interests to be served, but with a desire to see the general welfare, must decide at the November election whether he sanctions the trade of votes for wage increases, and whether he will endorse an administration that compels the great government of the United States to acknowledge the superior power of the representatives of four labor unions."
