

TO FOLLOW CITY BEAUTIFUL IDEA IN CAPITOL PARK

Governor to Confer With Planning Commission on Extension Problems

TO WIDEN STREET

"Happy to Co-operate With You," Declares State's Executive

Proper treatment of the Capitol Park Extension problem on a scale that will combine Harrisburg's "City Beautiful" idea with Governor Brumbaugh's plan to provide an attractive setting for the Capitol of the Commonwealth...

For "City Beautiful"

Incidentally, the State's Chief Executive reiterated his previous statement that he wishes to co-operate in every way to bring about the "development of a beautiful Harrisburg because a beautiful city will mean a beautiful Capitol."

Mr. Ferman's Letter

"We are confidently hoping," concluded President Ferman, "that your seal of approval will have been placed upon a definite Capitol Park plan in treating the old and the new sections, and that this may be done before the next session of the Legislature so that your thought may be embodied in any necessary legislation..."

The Governor's Views

And this is Governor Brumbaugh's reply: "Mr. Edwin S. Herman, President, City Planning Commission, Harrisburg, Pa. Dear Mr. Herman: I am grateful to you for your letter of September twenty-fifth and I shall immediately ask Mr. Rambo to arrange for a date convenient to both of us..."

Steel Magnate Interviews Reporter Who Goes to Interview Him

ASKS MANY QUESTIONS

Inquires If There Is Any Steelton-Harrisburg Annexation Sentiment

Charles M. Schwab, chairman and Eugene G. Grace, president, of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the honor guests at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce this evening, arrived in the city late this afternoon.

Mr. Schwab passed through the city shortly after noon in his private car Loreto, on his way to Lebanon, where he addressed the recently organized Chamber of Commerce at its first big dinner and met President Grace, Vice-President W. F. Roberts and General Manager Quincy Bent, who had gone to Lebanon previously.

Schwab Does the Interviewing

While the Loreto was being switched from the Union Station to the Philadelphia and Reading station, where it was attached to a Reading engine preparatory for the run to Lebanon as a special, the Steel King interviewed a reporter from the Telegraph for ten minutes.

Mr. Schwab's Questions

Mr. Schwab smilingly declined to reveal any of his future plans for developing the recently purchased Steelton plant, declaring that he is going to "talk about that this evening."

Talks of Annexation

He also expressed some interest in the relations between Steelton and Harrisburg and inquired whether there was much sentiment favoring the joining of the two municipalities.

At Lebanon

Mr. Schwab arrived in Lebanon at 1:30 and immediately went to the Lebanon club to address the Chamber of Commerce.

Milk Famine Caused by Deadlock of Dairymen and Distributors Hits N. Y. Hard

New York, Oct. 2.—The first effects of a milk famine were felt here to-day as the result of the deadlock between dairymen and distributors over the price the former shall receive for their product. It was estimated that the milk trains brought to this city last night 600,000 less than the usual 2,500,000 quarts.

STEEL MAGNATES HONOR GUESTS AT DINNER TONIGHT

Schwab, Grace, Roberts and Bent Will Meet Businessmen of City

AT LEBANON TODAY

Will Be Whisked About Town in Autos by Reception Committee

Harrisburg to-night will honor the great steel king, Charles M. Schwab.

The man who heads the great Bethlehem Steel Corporation with the mills that never cease from turning at Bethlehem, Steelton, Lebanon and Sparrows Point, Md., will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce in the Masonic Temple to-night.

Eugene G. Grace, the youthful president of the Bethlehem, and the man whom Schwab declares is chiefly responsible for the steady growth and development of his mills, will be honored with his chief.

Quincy Bent, general manager of the Steelton plant, and W. F. Roberts, vice-president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, too, will be among the guests of the evening.

And Harrisburg intends to make this dinner one which will leave no doubts in the minds of these great captains of the steel industry that here is a city ready and willing to do its part in whatever plans may be laid for the future development of that industry.

Two score men prominent in the business life of Harrisburg and surrounding territory will sit at the table this evening with the guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce.

Coming from his home in Chicago, Mr. Trefz reached the city at noon today.

Mr. Schwab and Mr. Grace, traveling by special train from Lebanon, will arrive here shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon. They will be met at the train by a reception committee from the Chamber of Commerce and will be taken for a short automobile ride about the city and to Steelton. They will then return to their private car and dress for dinner, arriving at the banquet hall shortly after 6 o'clock.

The forty who will sit at the honor guests' table will include the following men: Charles M. Schwab, Eugene G. Grace, W. F. Roberts, vice-president Bethlehem Steel Company; Quincy Bent, general manager Bethlehem Steel Company; J. William Bowman, Edward L. McCollin, Edward F. Trefz, E. Z. Wallower, Spencer C. Gilbert, W. F. M. Murrie, Congressman A. S. Kreider, George Pomeroy, J. F. Auch, vice-president Philadelphia and Reading Railway; George Dallas Dixon, vice-president Pennsylvania Railroad; Moorehead C. Kennedy, president Cumberland Valley Railroad; Samuel Kaufman, David Kaufman, W. T. Hildrup, Jr., W. M. Oselesky, William M. Donaldson, George F. Watt, Edward Bailey, George E. Tripp, Henderson Gilbert, E. J. Stackpole, William Jennings, Donald McCormick, Ed. S. Herman, David Tracy, W. L. Finch, New York; A. C. Stamm, Andrew Patterson, Robert McCormick, George A. Shreiner, William B. McCaleb, George W. Bogar, W. P. Starkey, C. W. Burnett, The Rev. E. N. Kremer, D. D., A. D. Bacon.

GREAT STEEL KING HERE TODAY STILL 'CHARLIE' TO FRIENDS

WHENEVER I talk with Charlie Schwab for five minutes I have an irresistible impulse to grab my hat, rush out and do something.

My first impression of Mr. Schwab was exactly that. It came on a cold night last winter, when the moonlight snow lay still as silver around his mansion of cream granite and stone on Riverside Drive, New York city.

As we sat down I began to have the feeling that had come with my first visit to a power plant. Tall, solid, but tinglingly alive, Mr. Schwab seemed the shelter for some tremendous force, some current with a flow as constant as a dynamo.

They went over the letter together, and the financier was forced to admit that it contained exactly what Mr. Schwab had said.

In 1897, at the age of thirty-five, Charles M. Schwab became president of the Bethlehem Steel Company.
