House Filled at Second Act For Bill That Compares With Best of This Season

An unusually early S R O was in force last night at the Majestic, where an unusually good bill is holding forth for the first half of the week. There's not a duil moment in the bill, and there's variety enough to please most anyone. Alton and Allen aren't so strong on the song, but their dancing, a bit of which savors of the eccentric,

An including a sclever as one might with for charles Rogers and company do a comedy sketch, "The Movie Fiends," which holds many a good laugh. Mildred Hayward is a clever comedienne whose boy impersonations are by far the best, with her Italian character-rization running a close second. Kuter. Hughes and Kuter, three juveniles, are well liked in Harrisburg. And they should be, for there is in the act a boy soprano voice of unusual ability, and, even more rare, high and intermediate registers equally developed. Closing the bill is Marion Crawford with her fashion models—with, yes, a better within the show in the sone, with her litalian character-lauding a close second. Kuter. AMUSE MENTS JUNIOR MIMIC

WORLD OF 1915 Clever Conception of Mimicry; Good Work by Performers

Before Small House

All of the present-day celebrities of the stage disported themselves last night at the Orpheum, where the "Junior Mimic World of 1916" held sway. The show is evidently a new sway. The show is evidently a new one, and it was further evident that people just didn't know what it was going to be, for the house was next door to nil. But the spontaneity of applause was pretty near proof conclusive that the bill was not without merit, and that's the whole truth. Bert Williams, Tempest and Sunshine, the Dolity Sisters, Chauncey Oleott, Kubelik, Eddie Foy, George Cohan, Maggie Cline, were all there—in imitation of course, and mighty clever imitations they were, too. A lack of harmony between the orchestra and the performers was most noticeable, and in some ways marred the entertainment. The show is a rather novel conception, and a little more time should establish a reputation which should carry it over big.
