FAVORS INCREASED MINISTERS' PAY

U. B. Conference Superintendent Asks to Have Minimum Salary Made $800

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 6.—At yesterday's session of the United Brethren conference the following were elected to membership: Paul O. Shettel and C. Guy Stambach, York; Harry B. Baker, Newburg; Carl Mundis, Yoe; William C. Wlchter, Walkersville, Md.; George B. Clay, Quincy, and W. F. Kohler, Fayetteville.

The Rev. Dr. W. H. Washinger was elected conference superintendent for the fourteenth year. His report stated that five young men and young women were granted quarterly conference licenses. Cornerstones were laid last year as follows: Sunday school building at Red Lion; church auditorium at Hanover, and Sunday school room at Washington. A church was dedicated at Waynesboro and pipe organs installed in Hanover chapel and Boonsboro church. A new parsonage was built at Williamsport and churches remodeled and reopened at Biglersville, Pa.; Thurmont, Pa.; Manchester, Pa.; Cedar Grove, Md.; Newburg, Pa.; Springport, Pa.; Baltimore, Third Church; Rayville, Md.; Halliam, Pa.; Mount Wolf, Pa.; Walkersville, Md.; Chambersburg, Pa., and Myersville, Md. Dr. Washinger recommended the minimum salary be made $800 and parsonage, an increase in 13 years from a minimum of $300 and parsonage.

CHICAGO EXPERT SHOW SHOW AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE WORKS If the electrical and civil engineers of the Engineers Society of Pennsylvania didn't get an opportunity last evening to learn all about the "in-nards" of the automatic telephone, it wasn't because E. L. Grauel, the Chicago expert, and Henry Tracy, president of the Cumberland Valley Telephone Company, were not chuck full of information about the new device.

The Engineers Society had been invited to attend a practical demonstration of the new phone system and the demonstration was held last evening at the "girlless" exchange, 308 Market street. The methods of calling by twisting the dial, the various and innumerable advantages of the automatic and some interesting facts about the history and development of the service were touched upon by Expert Grauel.

Hazleton.—In addition to reforesting the water sheds around Hazleton with 50,000 pine trees, the Wyoming Valley Supply Company has undertaken to restock the streams and ponds with fish.

Birdsboro.—Daniel Davidheiser, 18 months old, son of David Davidheiser, strangled to death, when a bean lodged in his throat.

Bethlehem.—Charles Millheim, Sr., a Civil war veteran, who fought in thirty-seven battles in that conflict, is dead at his home in Hokendauque.

"Our Library Table" by Henry Irving Dodge. (Houghton, Mifflin Co., $1.00) When Thomas Carlyle wrote Sartor Resartus he evidently did not figure on the ultimate arrival, in the realms of clothes, of "Cage-Man Skinner," cashier, the "walk-in-the-slush, sit-in-the-corner, watch-the-other-fellow-dance, male-wallflower proposition." Skinner was a man who didn't figure on the value of appearances in achieving success and the book deals with his heaving struggle and his final demand on his bosses for a third ownership in the business.

It is a history of a dress suit and a humorous dilution on the value of the personal equation and an appreciation of human nature in making for success in the business world. It is a bright and sparkling entertainer of an hour.

"Mr. Britling Sees It Through," by H. G. Wells (MacMillan & Co., New York), is essentially a war story. It tells not so much of conditions at the front as of the effect of the war on the minds of those who stay at home. Among these latter is Mr. Britling, an Englishman of the best type.

The beginning of the story finds England's thoughts far away from the possibility of conflict. Suddenly she finds herself precipitated into the greatest war in history, and England awakes and stretches herself. In Mr. Britling it personified the English people, who after a while come to realize the personal interest that each has in the war. Britling's sorrow is all England's sorrow, and his first thought is blind rage against the perpetrators of war.

It is an intensely and dramatically interesting book, well written and well conceived. The characters are quite fascinating and very much alive.

"Universal Military Education and Service," by Lucien Howe, Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine, member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and Professor Emeritus of Ophthalmology. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York).

A research work on the "Swiss System For the United States," written as a teacher writes, catalogued so that no question relating to military training remains unanswered. The improvement perceived in young men through systematic military training appeals to Dr. Howe from the scientific and medical standpoint, and the phenomenal success that attended the inauguration of military training in the schools of Wyoming is cited and explained as an example. The apathy of the present Democratic Congress in failing to note effectively the trend of public opinion on matters of preparedness is specifically mentioned. The statistical data is invaluable. Dr. Howe's book is a peer in the preparedness literature of the day.

"To the Minute," by Anna Katherine Green. (G. P. Putnam's Sons). Anna Katherine Green's latest book contains two stories, "To the Minute" and "Scarlet and Black." Both are equally thrilling and will serve well to pass away a few idle minutes. The first is the usual love story with the added zest of a mystery, while the second deals with Russian Princesses and dark plots, and has a wholly unexpected denouement.

Books Received: "Wit and Wisdom of Woodrow Wilson," (Doubleday, Page & Co.); "Home Care of Consumptives," by Roy L. French, (G. P. Putnam's Sons); "Life and Confessions of Oscar Wilde" (two volumes), by Frank Harris; "Dead Yesterday," by Mary Agnes Hamilton, (George H. Doran Co.); "The Towers of Hum," by Ethelyn-Leslie Huston, (Geo. H. Doran Co.); "The More Excellent Way," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, (Putnam's).
