

STORY OF GOOD WOMAN'S WORK

Lucy M. Burd Has Established Home That Is Saving Boys

Copyright, 1916, Star Company.
Our daily life teems with tales of sad, bad and foolish women who make mistakes and do evil deeds, and spoil their own lives and the lives of others. But in spite of these o'er-ture dark tales, the world is starred with beautiful souls, doing beautiful work in the vineyard of the Lord. Here is the story of one woman who consecrated her life to God through service to humanity. Her name is Lucy M. Burd, and she has an industrial school in Bedminster, Pennsylvania.

To a friend who asked her for an account of her undertakings she wrote the following interesting letter. It will be an inspiration to all who are striving against difficulty to accomplish some worthy purpose:

"Twelve years ago I left Philadelphia with a boy thirteen, who had not slept in a bed or eaten at a table for two years. My object was to start a home for unfortunate and misunderstood children. I had neither money nor interested friends to help me. "We arrived at the farm on a cold day, followed by a colder night. The conditions were what most people would have thought well-nigh impossible for the making of a home. I had invested $50 in furniture, and soon we had the coziest room I think I ever saw.

"There was neither rich carpet nor costly furniture—just plain things which meant home.

"A man and his wife lived in one end of the farmhouse, but vacated it in a few weeks. This left the entire house to us. The owner lived in Doylestown. He loaned me the house, a portion of ground and left some stock at the barn for us. The little fellow took a vital interest in everything; but neither of us knew how to milk, so we were obliged to hire a girl from a neighboring farm to teach us. We soon learned to milk quite well and do the work at the barn.

"At first our home was open only to Juvenile Court boys. It only took a few weeks before we numbered seventeen, and then twenty, which was all we could care for. We learned to economize in every possible way. I remember one little fellow, who did the milking and thought we were using more milk than he could afford to let us have, suggested that we do without milk on our oatmeal for a week. Strange to say, every boy was willing. At the same time he insisted on the cats having their full share. This little fellow has since graduated from the Philadelphia Trades School as an electrician.

"The first year was a hard financial struggle. All we had to depend on was a little money that a few of the boys could pay, with a small amount of my own, to provide food and clothing, besides furnishing the house. The boys became interested in all the farm work and were anxious to see how much they could do.

"At the beginning of the second year we had the entire farm of 120 acres. By this time we had made a few friends, who contributed something. While we did not have the means to provide teachers, we found it most difficult, at times, to do the work and keep the boys interested. Occasional runaways would result, but they were always anxious to get back, and would describe their trips with the greatest interest. We have now bought the farm and have the privilege of paying for it.

"I know you would like to know more about the success of the work. There are two ways of measuring success. The one, Making a Life; the other, Making a Living. To-day, with shrewd business, one can make a living and accumulate great wealth. To make a life requires finer workmanship. When the sun goes down we have no bookkeeper able to balance the profit and loss sheet. If there is a deficit it cannot be made up by shaving a little here and a little there. It is lost forever.

"Only the other day I heard a man say: 'If I had my time to go over, how differently I would do!' Showing us that a deficit when the day closes means a deficit when life ends.

"Seven years ago a little blue-eyed, light-haired girl came to live with me. She has been a great help in making our home pleasant. We had a great deal to learn to know how to live together and be happy. She was able to throw sunshine across the path of many a little child. To-night she is writing this letter to you on the typewriter. To-morrow morning she goes to West Chester to enter the Normal School. We hope to have her come back as a teacher for our school."

Surely this true story is more interesting than many a great work of fiction. I wish it might go straight to the heart of some millionaire philanthropist and bring to Lucy M. Burd the strong financial support which her splendid work deserves.

"We can be what we will to be. We can do what we will to do."

Wilson's Reply Fails to Satisfy Prohibitionists

Beresford, S. D., Oct. 6.—A response from Secretary Tumulty in regard to President Wilson's attitude on prohibition, received by the Prohibition national campaigning forces, failed to satisfy them. Charges that the secretary had evaded the issue were freely made.

President Wilson was asked by telegraph, almost two weeks ago, whether the California writs were authorized to use his name as being opposed to state-wide prohibition. A reply by telegraph at Bakersfield, Cal., on the following day was requested in order that the answer might be used in the California fight.

Tumulty's response went to San Francisco by mail and did not reach the party until day at Parker, S. D. He made no direct reference to the California situation. He inclosed two former letters on the President's position and said that there was a third, the Grogan letter, which was inaccessible.

A STRAW HAT

An old straw hat can be made to look like new if one cares to change the color. Mix the color wanted with a little cold water, using diamond dye, and add hot boiling water to mix to the shade desired. Use a fine brush to put it on with. Let dry in the sun.

Faded cushions can be revived in the same way.

Saturday will be the last day of The Bowman-Majestic Fashion Show. Three performances to-morrow in which to see Miss Catherine Crawford and her ten Fashion Models appear in Bowman costumes exclusively.

Note Particularly the Coats and Suits Offered At Popular Prices

It is not personal preference that impels us to enthuse over the autumn coats—it is their extreme practical usefulness. We think it is hardly possible that many women like tight-fitting top coats, because they are less comfortable and muss much finery. To enjoy a coat it must have that amplex which allows one to be—well cuddled up inside.

Simple lines are characteristic, falling from the shoulders in deep folds to the edge of the skirt. Serge, broadcloth, duvetyne, velveta, lined with contrasting colors give delightful appearance and relief from the older and most sombre linings. Cape effects on the shoulder and deep collars give a striking and pretty silhouette.

---Coats, $25 to $35

Much has been said about new suits — about prices going up; about qualities made inferior and numerous other things.

Have you seen the Bowman assortments? You'll readily note the values to be had at popular prices. You'll recognize fabrics that you've never before seen at these prices; dyes of a true shade; and in every feature that makes for the foundation of Excellent Styles, you will find none more valuable than these.

---Suits $25 to $35
