HUGHES ENDING HIS THIRD TRIP

Defines Lusitania Stand Mr. Hughes last night made an im passioned attack upon the Wilson administration at Youngstown, Ohio, which, he charged had fallen so low in its own estimation that it apparently could not believe that any one meant what he said.

Mr. Hughes centered his attack upon Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Secretary of War Baker. Mr. Baker had been quoted as comparing the soldiers under Washington at Valley Forge with the bandits under Villa. Mr. Hughes declared that these statements illuminated in a way nothing else had done the whole spirit under which the administration had faced international affairs.

Of Secretary Baker's statement Mr. Hughes, his voice shaken with emotion, said:

"I never supposed that the day would come when the representative of an American administration would say that of those who gave us our liberty. Mr. Hughes centered his attack upon

"An administration imbued with the spirit of true Americanism would be incapable of the statement attributed to the Secretary of War. It must bring the blush of shame to the check of every American that apologizes for the deplorable record in Mexico be made in this fashion."

The Hippodrome, where the address was delivered, was jammed to the doors and a great crowd was unable to gain admission. The audience was cordial and responsive.

Mr. Hughes covered also in a comprehensive manner his advocacy of the tariff, his conception of the needs of America-after the close of the war, false prosperity and the Adamson legislation. An administration imbued with the Philadelphia, Oct. 20. — Hughes beyond a doubt and fine prospects for a Republican Senate."

This prediction was made last night at the Bellevue by Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, before he went to Camden to deliver a campaign speech. "A scare was thrown into the Republican party some weeks aco, when a Democratic Congress passed the Adamson socalled eight-hour law," he continued. "This will react in our favor. It has set our men to working, and as a result we will carry all the doubtful States. As a campaign issue, the Adamson law has proved a failure."

at Chicago During Speech

Chicago, Oct. 20. — President Wilson came here yesterday to explain his view on problems facing the nation. Arriving in Chicago after shaking hands with crowds in Indiana, he delivered three speeches, participated in several street demonstrations and went over his western campaign plans with his managers. He left at midnight and will arrive at Long Branch, N. J., at midnight to-night. In a speech before the Chicago Press Club the President predicted the beginning of "a rennaissance of the sense of patriotic responsibility," and urred the development of progressiveness. Speaking before a gathering of women later, he urged more participation by women in the affairs of the nation; and at a meeting of "new citizens" he declared for a united America.

Women Roughly Handled
An attempted "silent demonstration" by members of the National Woman's Party in front of the Auditorium developed into a near riot in which the banners opposing Wilson were torn from the demonstrators and trampled, and the women were roughly handled. President Wilson was settled in an automobile a few hundred feet away when the demonstration started, but passed into the building and was not a witness to the scene that followed.

Shouting "shame," "disgrace" and "get the banners" a crowd of several hundred, sprinkled with women, charged the banner holders. Umbrellas and canes were used in the destruction of the placards.

Many of the women were knocked down and nearly all were roughly handled, especially those who strove to retain their banners.

The excitement continued until all the banners had been seized. With disheveled hair and solled and torn clothing the women marched back to their headquarters under police guard.

Squelches the Hecklers

The Colonel loves to be heckled by Wilson men. Thus far he has squelched every one of them with a verbal right jab to the jaw. At Jefferson City, the capital of Missouri, where the crowd was so big it spread over the crowd was so big it spread over the tops of freight cars, a youth shrieked: "I wouldn't shake hands with Roosevelt. Three cheers for Wilson."

with Roosevelt. Three cheers for Wilson."
Leveling a forefinger, the Colonel retorted: "Yes, and why don't you cheer for the dead babies of the Lusitania? That's about your style, my friend."
The Wilson enthusiasts was drowned in a chorus, "'Ray for Teddy, good old Teddy, he's our style."
The Colonel's message to Jefferson City was that this country must be a nation, not a "polyglot boarding house, and that "when you get a nation that's too proud to fight, it's just fit enough to be kicked."
Cheers cycloned down the tracks as the train pulled out.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 20.—John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the Currency, speaking here to-day before the 'Farmers' National Congress, described the relation of the Federal reserve law to the farmer and closed with a personal statement brought out by President Wilson's recent allusion to attacks on the comptroller.

"I see that our President, in an address at Shadow Lawn," said the comptroller, "tells the country that the bankers, or certain bankers, or some special interests, are after my official scalp because I, as the Comptroller of the Currency, have enforced the law. This is no surprise to me. I know that I have been held up as a kind of ogre, a rawhead and bloody bones, a terror to the banking and financial interests of the country. Maybe the best answer to that may be found in the records and indisputable facts that the national banks of the country to-day are stronger and in better condition than ever before; that they are more numerous than when I became comptroller, are more prosperous and for permission to increase the capital of the existing banks."

Emporia, Kan., Oct. 20. — It is just twenty years since William Allen white wrote a little editorial entitled, "What's the Matter With Kansas?" and set the prairie map revolving slowly around the elysian town of Emporia, an orbit which it still pursues.

Colonel Roosevelt celebrated the anniversary last evening by stopping here and talking for ten delirious minutes to Will White, Walt Mason and so many other residents of Boyville that the Santa Fe station and tracks couldn't hold them all.

He told them Wilson was dangerous and asked them to vote for Hughes, which, according to Mr.

YALE PAGEANT TO BE STAGED SAT.

7,000 Performers Will Enact Historic Scenes Before 60,000 Spectators

Sixty thousand spectators will view he production of 7,000 performers in the Yale bowl to-morrow in recog nition of the two hundredth anniversary of the removal of Yale College from Saybrook to New Haven. The big stadium, where in a few short weeks 60,000 people will again gather to see the repetition of the historic gridiron battles between Harvard and Yale, will be filled to capacity to se the dramatic review of the history of the college and university. The participating actors are taken from the university, the city of New Haven and ticipating actors are taken from the university, the city of New Haven and many cittes in Connecticut and nearby states, the huge spectacle being in charge of Francis H. Markoe, Yale, 1903, pageant master.

Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes, of Yale University, explains in the Yale Daily News that the four objects of the pageant are "to give Yale and the country a more adequate idea of Yale history, to help bind town and gown together, to aid in justifying the expenditure of several hundred thousand dollars on the bowl, to fulfill the larger purpose of building the bowl and to stimulate interest in the ancient art of pageantry."

The prelude, showing the medieval wedding procession of Margaret ap Jenkyn, the founder of the Yale family, is followed by scenes of the founding of the Colony of New Haven with purchase of the land by John Davenport and Theophilus Eaton from the Quinniplac Indians. Later come the stirring scenes at the time of the Revolution and those characteristic of the college in the early half of the last century. Yale's influence in the life of the nation stands out in such episodes as martyrdom of Nathan Hale and that of Theodore Winthrop, the first Union officer to fall in the Civil War. These in turn are followed by scenes of modern Yale, ending with a drill by the Yale battallon of field artillery, organized last winter and in service as a part of the federalized militia during all of the past summer. The whole multitude close the pageant with the singing of the Yale psalm.
