Bandit Breaks His Vow Girl's Faith Shattered

Denver, Col., Oct. 26. — Touched by a letter she received shortly before last Christmas from a prisoner in the penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., Miss Marie Ott, of 615 Knox court, began a correspondence with the man in a heartfelt desire, she says, to encourage and reform him. For many months she harbored the belief that her letters were leading him to a better life, and this belief was even strengthened by his replies, which assured her of the good she was doing him. Marie Ott was very happy and her work in the candy store at 33 Broadway seemed far less tedious. But yesterday her dream castles were shattered and her faith in human nature was shaken. For she learned that the man scarcely had been released from jail when he was rearrested in Cincinnati as a bandit and diamond robber. And she learned further that as a result of her efforts her name had been dragged into the case and that the letters she had written out of the fullness of her heart had been seized by the police as "evidence to be investigated."

The man is LeRoy Baker, known from coast to coast as a robber and bandit. When Miss Ott began her correspondence with him, he had to serve only one more year of a long term for robbery and larceny. He was released a few days ago from the penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Baker saw Miss Ott's photograph in a Denver newspaper. Charmed by her beauty, he wrote her a letter from his cell. Miss Ott was pleased. She had never seen him, but she felt sure he was just a victim of circumstances. She wrote him a letter of encouragement. The correspondence became regular, and some of the wisecracks of Cincinnati declare it eventually revealed no little affection on both sides.

"I had no interest whatever in him other than a desire to help him," said Miss Ott yesterday. "I received his first letter shortly before last Christmas. He wanted me to write him a letter to cheer him up."
