21 LIVES TOLL OF TYPHOID IN THE CITY ALONE

Many More in County, but the Records Are Not Yet Obtainable

Harrisburg's worst typhoid fever epidemic in years, breaking out in August and ending during the first part of last week, has taken a toll of twenty-one lives in Harrisburg, and many more in the county and other nearby points, records of which are not yet obtainable.

Hundreds of cases of the fever, which, health authorities say, were caused by contaminated ice cream, have been reported in many cities and towns, breaking records in a number of these places.

In Harrisburg 355 cases have been reported since August 14. Two deaths occurred in August, four in September and fourteen in October. These figures do not include nonresident deaths at the Harrisburg Hospital, where scores of patients were cared for, many of them being brought here from points outside of the city.

In 1915 a near epidemic was reported. Ninety-three cases were reported, but they were well scattered and traced almost entirely to outside sources of contagion.

Dr. J. M. J. Raunick, city health officer, as soon as he learned definitely the source of the trouble, urged people to stop eating ice cream until it was declared entirely safe by the City Health Department.

During the last eight years since accurate city records have been kept the number of typhoid cases reported each year follows:

1909.....	73	1913.....	41
1910.....	174	1914.....	36
1911.....	58	1915.....	93
1912.....	40	1916.....	535

During October the following died from typhoid fever: Mrs. George L. Frost, 57 Race street; Dr. W. E. J. Bomberger, 1459 Market street; Mrs. Lucy Miller, 615 Harris street; Robert Majors, 1423 James street; Mrs. Louise J. Atkins, 702 Race street; Mrs. Lydia Haas, 630 Emerald street; Edna Samuel Gohn, 2434 Jefferson street; Delmar Bomgardner, 1244 Walnut street; Mrs. Alice M. Robinson, 1222 North Third street; Katharine Bann, 251 Delaware street; Mildred C. Young, 2231 Atlas street, and M. E. Orris, 616 Feffer street.

In September the deaths included Mrs. Louise Corkle, 135 Vine street; David B. Mark, 68 North Seventeenth street; Joseph Warlow, 41 North Seventeenth street; Charles W. Van Aernam, 607 Feffer street.

The Republican enrollment is a gain of 230,958 over the enrollment of the gubernatorial campaign of 1914 and there are more than twice as many Republicans as Democrats, Socialists and Prohibitionists combined.
