

WHAT IT COSTS UNCLE SAM, HOST

Mexican Peace Envoys Like Style and America Must Foot the Bill

Atlantic City, Nov. 10. — Diplomacy for all its exactions, has its compensations. The plump little bluejacket who guards the door to the tenth floor of the Traymore when the American-Mexican joint commission is thrashing out grave international problems, doesn't care if they never get through.

He is living in the style in an $8 room and rubbing elbows with millionaires in the elevators and dining halls when he is not on duty. Life on the ocean wave never was like that.

The whole thing is being done in style, as befits a rich and powerful government to which money is no object. Uncle Sam must have convinced Carranza's envoys and their swarms of secretaries, interpreters, aids and other assistants that he is a free-handed host, even if the American commissioners have not persuaded them in six weeks or thereabouts to concede anything else. Uncle Sam is paying the freight.

Nobody knows, outside of William McNair, who represents the State Department here as disbursing officer, and the hotel management, exactly what it is costing, but it must be a neat little sum, even if these prosperous times. Estimates vary from $480 to $1,000 a day, and the chances are that the bill for housing the joint conference, with all of its sundries, runs very close to $5,000 a week.

There are no finer hotel quarters in the country, authorities have said, than the spacious suites here at Traymore, with their metal furniture, rich rugs and tiled baths, and Uncle Sam is providing luxurious quarters for forty persons as well as meeting rooms and offices, something like sixty rooms, all told, comprising virtually the whole of the ninth and tenth floors.

The joint commission conference chamber, facing the Boardwalk, formerly was part of a sea-fronting suite commanding a rental of $70 a day. The private conference chambers and offices of the five commissioners each represent two $50-a-day suites. On the ninth floor is the private dining room, where the commissioners and their ladies dine in state every evening.

Being accompanied only by Mrs. Lane, Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, and chairman of the American section of the commission, manages to get along with three rooms for his own use and another for his secretary, Herbert A. Myers. Judge George Gray also is apportioned three rooms for himself and Miss Gray and a fourth for E. C. Berl, his private secretary. John R. Mott, the third member of the American commission, has three rooms, while Dr. L. S. Rowe, the Philadelphia secretary to the commission, gets along with one.

The requirements of the Mexican commissioners are more exacting.

Chairman Cabrera, who is alone, manages to get along with three rooms for himself and one for L. J. Padillo, his secretary, but Ygnacio Bonilla requires five large chambers, because Senora Bonilla and two very charming señoritas are here with him, contributing very greatly to the social side of the international gathering. Alberto J. Pani, third member of Mr. Carranza's board, requires five rooms, also, because Mrs. Pani and two little Panis, boys full of life, also are guests of Uncle Sam.

Other members of the party include Juan B. Rojas, secretary to the Mexican commission; R. de Hoyos, his private secretary, and R. C. Lobato, his aid; G. I. Babcock, secretary to the American Commission; P. Castillo, assistant secretary to the Mexican Commission; E. L. de Gogorza, interpreter, and Mme. de Gogorza; James Linn Rodgers and Stephen Bonsai, special advisers for the American Commission; Mrs. Bonsai, F. de Roa Gonzales, counselor to the Mexican Commission; U. S. Torrelanca, Jr., secretary to the American Commission; Dr. A. R. Goodman, U. S. A., and Lieutenant R. B. Padock, aids, the former accompanied by Mrs. Goodman; J. Brooks B. Parker, assistant secretary to the American Commission, and a dozen or more others, including George Washington, who is dark of color and does menial tasks.

The commissioners and their retinues are averaging about five hours a day in session, with a recess over Saturday and Sunday and sometimes for longer periods, an adjournment having been taken Friday night until next Wednesday to enable Secretary Lane to do a little stumping for Mr. Wilson in New York State.

Every evening the commissioners and their ladies change to full dress, a rule which has spread also to the greater part of the entourage. Gay crowds through the Traymore lobby, enjoying the music. Downstairs in the grill the Senoritas Bonillas dance divinely. The Boardwalk beckons under the bright lights and there is always diversion to be had. Theater parties, dances or other entertainment have been of almost nightly occurrence since the joint commission came to town. Last Friday Secretary and Mrs. Lane dined Vice-President Marshall in state.

Diplomacy has its bright side.

Was a Physical Wreck for Years

"Wonderful Recovery" Enthusiastically Exclaims Mrs. R. D. Tagg, Speaking of Tanlac

NOW FULLY RECOVERED

"I was a physical wreck for over three years," exclaims Mrs. R. D. Tagg, who lives at 116 North Sixth street, Harrisburg, Pa. "I suffered torments from a severe form of chronic indigestion that never gave me a minute's peace night or day.

"Night after night I have walked the floor unable to sleep a wink though ready to drop in my tracks from exhaustion and if I laid down the gas that had formed in my stomach would press up against my heart and I would be almost suffocated. Many and many a time this has kept up for three nights in succession until I had become a complete wreck as I said.

"And I could not eat a morsel of nourishing or sustaining food for the agony that food caused me was more than I could bear and I was forced to subsist on dry stale crusts and even these distressed me terribly.

"Oh how I hunted and sought for a remedy that would give me at least a small measure of relief but they all failed when it came to the test and I was convinced that I was incurable when Tanlac came along.

"I read about it in the papers and learned that it had helped so many others similarly afflicted and I began taking it, not with any hope of a cure, but thinking that it might bring me some relief.

"I cannot yet realize that I am well again. It is a wonderful recovery for my stomach has been so toned up that I can eat real food once more without suffering afterwards, the formation of gas has stopped and I can go to bed at night and sleep soundly until the next morning."

Tanlac, the famous reconstructive tonic, invigorant and appetizer is now being specially introduced here at Gorgas' drug store where the Tanlac man is meeting the people and explaining the merits of this master medicine.—Advertisement.

CHEAPER TO EAT IN JOHNSTOWN?

Says Average Price of Food Is Higher in Harrisburg

Over in Johnstown yesterday the Chamber of Commerce held a sort of love feast at which prominent citizens apparently tried to explain why folks persisted in living in Johnstown, and among other reasons was the alleged fact that it is cheaper to eat in Johnstown than in Harrisburg. Local merchants will be interested in the figures given the Johnstown people in one of the Flood City's big stores. Sloan said:

"In making our comparison we are using six different items of staple commodities, goods that go into daily consumption in most every family.

"I will take for a basis of our comparison the Johnstown prices in Harrisburg and Pittsburgh. These cities are situated similar to Johnstown and would take about the same rate of freight on merchandise shipped from different points.

"The items I have selected are sugar, flour, potatoes, butter, canned corn and tomatoes.

"The prices are based on the actual retail selling price as taken from six different retail stores in each city during the present week and should give you a very fair average of the retail selling prices on the general line of groceries to-day.

"The average retail selling price of granulated sugar in Altoona, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh is 8 1/2 cents per pound. This same grade of sugar is sold in Johnstown at 8 1/4 cents per pound.

"The average retail price for fancy spring wheat flour in Altoona, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh is $2.75 for the quarter-barrel sack. This same grade of flour can be purchased at $2.65 per quarter-barrel sack in Johnstown.

"The average retail price of potatoes in Altoona, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh is $2.20 per bushel, and you can purchase a 60-pound bushel right here at home for $2.

"The retail selling price of best quality fresh creamery butter in the above-mentioned cities is 46 cents per pound, and the retail selling price at home is 44 cents per pound.

MARK HISTORIC FORT HUNTER SITE

Members of Historical Societies Attend Dedication Ceremonies

Just at "the end of a perfect day" members of the State Historical Commission, the Historical Society of Dauphin County, Harrisburg Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, a group of school children and many others interested, gathered at Fort Hunter yesterday for the dedication ceremonies incident to unveiling a historic tablet. The tablet marks the stockade constructed in 1776-7 for the organizing of troops and furnishing rations to soldiers in the Indian wars.

Attached to a huge granite boulder from the nearby mountain is a bronze tablet, keystone shaped and inscribed like the cut above. It is placed in the yard of John W. Rely, along the roadway, just inside the former line of the stockade.

Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh spoke for the State of Pennsylvania; State Librarian Thomas Lynch Montgomery for the State Historical Commission and Attorney Benjamin M. Nead for the Historical Society of Dauphin County.

The most interesting exercises closed with singing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," led by President Theodore B. Klein of the Historical Society, and heartily joined in by the large assemblage gathered on the lawn, bright with autumn flowers.

TO HIDE IN BATHTUB
Lykens, Nov. 10.—All Lykens, Wisconsin and Williamstown expect to turn out to-night to watch Fred Shott ride around town—in a bathtub. The tub will be a-top a motor truck and Fred will try not to look foolish and to-day of how "Jim" Stewart built and maintained a baseball field for the boys of the neighborhood.

Funeral services will be held from his residence. The Rev. George Edward Hawes of the Market Square Presbyterian Church, will have charge of the services.

"Jim" Stewart, Friend of the Boys, to Be Buried Tomorrow Afternoon

James L. Stewart, contractor and builder, who died Wednesday at the Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, will be buried to-morrow afternoon.

One of the finest tributes that could be paid him was a story a number of the "fellows" of the neighborhood told to-day of how "Jim" Stewart built and maintained a baseball field for the boys of the neighborhood.

Funeral services will be held from his residence. The Rev. George Edward Hawes of the Market Square Presbyterian Church, will have charge of the services.

WHEN you have something to sell, which someone else is likely to want to BUY, the QUICKEST, easiest way of getting ACTION, is to insert a WANT AD in the Telegraph.

Suppose you wish to sell your Automobile, and buy new. You have a sign, reading "For Sale" hung on the back of the car, and you then stand the car out on the lawn, where all passersby can see.

For every ten people who will pass in front of your place, and see that "For Sale" sign, A THOUSAND would see your ad in the FOR SALE columns of the Telegraph.

And so it is with about everything else that you might wish to sell—the little SIGN has its uses, but if you really want ACTION, do not pin your faith to signs, but jump into the Telegraph with your little WANT AD!
