closed for eggs in

25 cents higher than to send a dozen fresh-laid Pennsylvania Lycing eggs to a New York banker at $1 per dozen from November 1 to April 1 next. Mr. Wittman also reported that

SLAYS BRIDE SOON TO BE MOTHER

fers from that he made in Los Angeles. He no longer says the shooting was the result of sudden impulse, but now declares that on July 3 he decided to kill his wife.

Durgin, because of his friendship for Bertha Elrod, who was employed at the Glenwood Sanatorium at Glendale, St. Louis county, where he went to work after being released from the St. Louis Sanatorium for the insane after spending the greater part of nineteen years there.

"I was sorry for her because of her condition and because I knew I could not support her, much less support both her and a child," he said. "I had felt myself in honor bound to marry her, though she was only 20 and I was 45. I was making only $20 a month at the Glenwood Sanatorium and I gave up my job before I married her."

After the marriage Durgin and his wife spent a short time at the home of her parents at Belle, Mo. He then went to Lexington, Mo. While there, he said, he at first meant to kill himself, but later decided to kill his wife.

When he and his wife went to the Pontiac on the night of July 6, he said, he had an automatic pistol.

"I suggested that she lie on her left side," he said. "That was because I wanted to shoot her in the right temple."

Durgin said he shot his wife about 2 a. m. "I lay down, but couldn't sleep," he said. "I was happy, though, because I knew she was out of her misery." He told of taking a train for Indianapolis at 5 a. m. and of going to Chicago later. He said he could not remember details of his journey to Los Angeles. He had $150, he said, when he departed from St. Louis.
