WANT BRITISH TO TAKE OVER FRENCH GAINS

Champagne region, where an attack on the French lines near Auberive by a strong hostile detachment is declared to have been repulsed.

On the eastern front, in the Carpathians, the Russians appear to be holding their own. Petrograd reporting the repulse of Austro-German attacks in this region.

Berlin Admits Loss - To-day's German official statement in reporting on the fighting along the Ancre, admits the loss to the British of Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Division with the lines connecting them. The losses on both sides were heavy, it is declared, the Germans suffering considerably because of their tenacious defense.

General Von Falkenhayn continues to make progress in his invasion of Rumania from the Transylvania front. Both Petrograd and Bucharest admit Teutonic successes. The Russo-Rumanian troops have been compelled to give ground at one point in the region northeast of Campulung and to withdraw southward in the Jiu valley from Bumbesti, where the Austro-German forces have pushed some 12 miles south of the border.

Progress also along the Moldavian border of Rumania is claimed by Berlin which announces the retirement of the Russians to the frontier after the fighting that has been in progress in the Gyergo mountains.

No change in the situation in Obrodja is reported from any official source.

Germans Completely Surprised by British in Attacks Along Ancre

(Copyright, 1916, By Associated Press) With the British Armies in France, Nov. 13, via London, Nov. 14 - (5:14 a. m.) - The Germans were apparently completely surprised by this morning's attack in the valley of the Ancre. An evidence of this was found in the fact that the garrison of the trenches around Beaumont-Hamel were preparing for breakfast at the very moment when the British infantry stormed the position. The British, after partially clearing the underground galleries and rounding up 700 prisoners, proceeded to eat their prisoners' breakfast, telling the captives that they would be fed when they arrived within the British lines.

4,000 Prisoners - A total of nearly four thousand prisoners has so far been sent to the cages, including a regimental commander who was captured in a dug-out with a major, an adjutant and a number of other officers. The majority of the prisoners are Silesians, and, according to the British officers, very inferior fighting material. The German higher command depended apparently on the supposedly impregnable character of the old front line and its strongly fortified villages rather than on the stamina of the troops. The British officers believe that the Germans withdrew their best men for service elsewhere on the British front where the new and shallower positions to which the defenders have been forced demand greater resisting power on the part of the infantry.

British Losses Light - The British losses were unusually light owing largely to the unexpectedly feeble character of the German machine gun fire at Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Division. Large numbers of German dead were found strewn in the wrecked trenches of the original main line. This line consisted of four parallel roads of trenches, the last being flush with the western face of Beaumont-Hamel.

For some days past the sector attacked to-day and the area behind have been subjected to successive bombardments which rose to a record pitch yesterday and resulted in the demolition of a large part of the defenses. The garrison accepted the morning's deluge of shells as part of the usual daily program and did not fully realize the danger until the British infantry was seen approaching in the darkness.

Attacked From Rear - The British north of Beaumont-Hamel was held up on a front about one thousand yards west of Serre. The first detachment captured some German trenches and passed eastward toward the village. Suddenly hidden machine guns and infantry snipers scattered in great profusion in the craters and other shelters, began firing in the backs of the attacking troops and necessitated their withdrawal.

North of Serre the British gained ground but owing to the failure of the advance immediately south the position is subjected to an enfilading fire from higher ground in the neighborhood of the village. A number of isolated pockets are being cleared of Germans in the intervening ground between Beaumont-Hamel and Beaumont-Sur-Ancre. The British are firmly established on the western outskirts of the latter hamlet. The remaining fragments of the old German line immediately south of the Ancre which were "pinched out" by the British flank pivoting to the northeast around the elbow of the stream, had been partially isolated since the capture of Schwaben redoubt. Three hundred Germans, the only survivors of the bombardment, were captured in this extensive system of riverside caves. Prior to the attack the only communication between the caves and the German rear was by a causeway across the Ancre which could only be traversed at night.

Teutonic Retreat in Dobrudja Is Taking Form of Disaster

London, Nov. 14 - Field Marshal Von Mackensen's retreat in Dobrudja has assumed disastrous proportions. The Russians have succeeded in crossing the Danube at two points south of Tchernavoda, which means that Von Mackensen's army is being taken in the rear and has been forced back from the Constantza-Tchernavoda railway line. Petrograd dispatches declare his force is demoralized from reverse heavy losses, disease and lack of reinforcements.

The Black Sea port of Constantza is reported again under fire of the Russian fleet.

The recent Serbian victory in Macedonia appears from the Entente accounts to have been a brilliant one. Paris reports that the Germans and Bulgarians were pushed back nearly two miles in the Cerna river region, southeast of Monastir, in a two-day battle, and that they lost 1,000 men in prisoners. Unofficial accounts give an additional Serbian success to the north along the bend of the river, carrying the closing-in movement on Monastir still further.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL IS BEING DISCUSSED

authorization by the people of a loan of $1,250,000 to remedy the high school situation. And three junior high schools are included in the proposed remedial scheme.

Professor Geary pointed out that 50 per cent. of the boys and girls of the grammar grades leave school before entering high school and that unless they can secure the advantages of the junior institution they are forever deprived of even partial high school advantages. He emphasized the fact that the junior high school curriculum, which includes domestic and manual training, community civics and business training, should pretty thoroughly equip the young man or woman who can't attend the high school or college for his or her future life work.

Six pretty little girls who posed for the lecture and discussion on drawing by Mrs. H. C. Fetterolf were an attractive feature of to-day's program. Other sectional meetings were interestingly discussed by the following: Dr. Feuber Post Halleck, who talked on the most common, everyday mistakes in one's daily conversation; Miss Cora Rebeck, who, in speaking of the teacher's relation to the community, emphasized the importance of a teacher's remaining in the community in which she teaches, and Dr. S. A. Courtis, who applied a lot of practical tests in demonstrating the importance of efficient reading instruction.

Speakers at this afternoon's session of the institute were Dr. Halleck, who talked on "Modern Educational Psychology;" Dr. Ernest Burnham, whose subject was "Rural Education;" and Dr. Courtis, whose talk was "Nature and Progress of Measurement."
